PREFACE.

THE collection of MSS. here catalogued had its beginning (so far as can be ascertained) in the gift (or bequest) by Sir Geo. Carew, President of Munster (died 1629), of some MSS. in the Irish language (Nos. 1432 to 1436). One book indeed (No. 609) was presented by Ussher himself, but at what date is not known. In 1652, Miles Sumner was a benefactor to the Library, and, a little later, Bishop Henry Jones, Vice-Chancellor, presented the Book of Durrow, one of our most valued possessions. From this small beginning the collection was raised to a position of the first importance by the acquisition, in 1661, of Archbishop Ussher's Library, which had been purchased for Trinity College, a few years before, by the officers and soldiers of Cromwell's army in Ireland (see The Book of Trinity College, p. 149). The MSS. belonging to this Library occupy almost the entire of Presses A, B, C, and D.

Not long after this, in 1674, Sir Jerome Alexander, Justice of the Common Pleas, bequeathed to the College a valuable collection of books, including many MSS., chiefly relating to law and politics. These MSS. are contained in Press G, shelves 3 and 4. In 1682 Dr. Huntingdon, of Merton College, Oxford, afterwards Provost of Trinity College, presented to the Library several Oriental MSS. (Nos. 1510, 1518–1528). A most important addition to the Library was made, in 1741, by Bishop Stearne's bequest of the MSS. formerly belonging to Dr. John Madden, and now contained in Press F. These include the Depositions relating to the rebellion of 1641, which had belonged to Matthew Barry, Clerk of the Council. W. Barry, M.A., and John Lyon, M.A., were also liberal benefactors before 1742.

The next important accession consisted of a collection of Irish MSS. which had belonged to the celebrated Dr. Edward Lhwyd. These were presented, in 1786, by Sir John Sebright (Nos. 1298, 1302–1317, 1319–1322). In the same year some beautiful Oriental MSS. were presented by W. Digges Latouche.

The Library of M. Greffier Fagel, Pensionary of Holland, purchased for the College, in 1802, by the Board of Erasmus Smith, included many valuable MSS. chiefly relating to the affairs of France and Holland (see Nos. 893–909, 984, 987, 988, also 81). A fine collection of Egyptian Papyri was presented by Lord Kingsborough in 1838.

In 1854 Dr. C. W. Wall, Vice-Provost, purchased and presented to the Library a very remarkable set of volumes, being original records of the Inquisition in Italy (Nos. 1223 to 1277. See note on p. 241). In the same year the Book of Armagh, anciently called the 'Canon of Patrick' (No. 52), was purchased by Archbishop J. G. Beresford, and presented to the College. But the part taken by the Rev. W. Reeves (afterwards Bishop of Down) in securing this MS. must not be forgotten. As soon as he learned (in 1853) that it was for sale, and in danger of being lost to the country, he forthwith paid the price demanded (£300). Some few months later the Archbishop, on being made acquainted with the circumstances, repaid Mr. Reeves the sum he had expended, and presented the book to the College. There are few ancient MSS. the history of which is so well known. Written in 807, it was not very long after provided with an endowment to secure its safe custody (it being used in administering oaths, which, so taken, had a peculiar virtue), and it remained in the hereditary charge of one family (hence named Moyer, or Mac Moyer) for about eight centuries. At the end of that period (in or about 1680) it was pawned, for five pounds, by the keeper, who had become the owner. Subsequently (before 1707) it was bought by Mr. Brownlow, from whose lineal representative it was purchased by Mr. Reeves (see Book of Trinity College, pp. 163, 164; and for further detail Proceedings of Royal Irish Academy, Ser. iii., vol. 2).*

In 1857, Charles Count de Meuron presented several volumes relating to the history of Geneva and of the Reformation in Switzerland (Nos. 1145–1163).

The bequest of Rev. Aiken Irvine (1881) included several MSS. In 1890 the Rev. Robert P. Graves presented a collection of MSS. which had belonged to Sir W. R. Hamilton, including his correspondence with Sir John Herschel, Professor De Morgan, and others.

In addition to the above, the following donors are mentioned in the Catalogue of 1742:—Murtagh Dowling, Sir William Gore, LL.D., Thomas Halley, M.A., Thomas Hey, Corn. Hignett, M.A., Alexander Jephson, M.A., Archbishop Parker (of Dublin), Sir Henry Prescott, Gordian Strowbridge, and Charles Willoughby, M.D. Other later donors were:—The East India Company, Sir R. Peel on behalf of the Irish Government, the Duke of Leinster, Col. Beaufoy, George Roe Boyce, M.A., Rev. W. G. Carroll, M.A., Major Clenaghan, Rev. C. H. Davis, M.A. Oxf., Captain Egan, Rev. C. R. Elrington, D.D., W. Eustace, B.A., Lieut. Ellis, G. A. Grierson, B.A., C.I.E., Rev. H. C. Groves, D.D., Rev. Charles Hamilton, Rev. S. Haughton, M.D., W. S. Haughton, Rob. Jager, Ven. S. M. Kyle, LL.D., W. H. Le Fanu, Harold Littledale, M.A., Provost H. Lloyd, D.D., Major Long, Rev. Thos. Lyster, D.D., W. Shaw Mason, —— M'Cartney, R. S. Mansfield, George M'Kay, LL.D., Count de Meuron, W. D. Moore, B.A., Major Nicolls, John O'Donovan, LL.D.,

* The MS. had been offered for sale by auction in 1831, and bought in at £390.

George A. Ram, J. H. Reddan, Provost Sadleir, D.D., St. George Stock, M.A. Oxf., Whitley Stokes, LL.D., Rev. J. W. Stubbs, D.D., Deane Swift, M.A., T. J. Westropp, M.A.

MSS. have been purchased from time to time both singly and in collections. The principal collections to be noted are :—a series of Icelandic MSS. (Nos. 989–1037), Sir W. Gore Ouseley's Oriental MSS., and Bishop Reeves' MSS. (Nos. 1059–1142 and 1188, 1695–1697).

The oldest Catalogue of the MSS. in this Library is that numbered 7 in the present list. It was compiled in 1688, and from it was taken that printed in the Catalogi Libb. MSS. Angliae et Hiberniae (Oxon., 1697).

A few years after the Library had been transferred to the present building (completed in 1732), Mr. John Lyon was employed to draw up a Catalogue for use in the Library itself, and this has continued up to the present to be the list used by readers.

In or about 1814, Dr. Henry J. Monck Mason, under the appointment of the Irish Board of Commissioners of Public Records, undertook the compilation of a Catalogue with a view to publication. The terms proposed by Dr. Monck Mason were approved, and when the Catalogue was finished in the rough copy, the Board required him to deliver it to them. On Dr. Mason then raising the question of remuneration, it was discovered that 'no Minute had been entered of the original engagement. So (writes Dr. Mason) as the members of the Board had been, some of them, changed, and others required the production of the written vote, my engagement was not holden to be sufficient to overbalance the claims of public œconomy, which were rather pressing at the time.' When Dr. Mason handed over his MS. to Trinity College (in 1833), it was intended to publish it (after revision) at the expense of the College. The revision, however, was never completed. Dr. Mason employed Mr. Edward O'Reilly to catalogue the Irish MSS. At a later date, however (about 1840–1845), these (as far as p. 48 of No. 1337) were very carefully catalogued by a more skilful scholar, Dr. John O'Donovan.

In the compilation of the present Summary Catalogue, the works of Lyon and Monck Mason, as well as those of O'Reilly and O'Donovan, have, of course, been made use of, but frequent reference to the MSS. themselves was necessary in order either to verify or, as it might be, to correct the entries. A considerable number of MSS. has, moreover, been acquired since the latest of those Catalogues was compiled.

It is, no doubt, desirable that the more ancient volumes, which often contain several distinct MSS., should be thoroughly re-examined with a view to a more complete description. But to have waited for this would have been to postpone the publication indefinitely. The present list will at least serve to replace, for the present, Bernard's old Catalogue, which has hitherto been the only one accessible to students at a distance, and which, apart from other imperfections, only covers half the present collection. In a few instances the older Catalogue will be found to give a more detailed enumeration. A considerable portion of the contents of several of Ussher's books consists of brief excerpts from printed books, and where this is the case, it is rather misleading than useful to enumerate them.

As an alphabetical index is a most valuable addition to such a Catalogue, no pains have been spared to make the indexes as complete as possible.

Advantage has been taken of the opportunity afforded by the publication of this volume to add a Catalogue of the important collection of maps contained in the Fagel Library, although most of these are printed.

[Bernard's Catalogue was taken from that numbered 7 in the present List, which was drawn up in 1688, and has many errors. Since that time some collections have been divided and fresh combinations made; hence it is often difficult, and, in some cases, has been found impossible, to identify Bernard's items.]

NOTES TO PRECEDING TABLE.

No. in Bernard's Catalogue.
179	Noted as missing in 1688.
203	,, ,, 1702.
248	,, ,, ,,
250	,, ,, ,,
255	Was lent to Dr. Raymond in 1720, and was lost sight of until 1769, when it was found in Drogheda, and purchased by Chevalier O'Gorman, who presented it to the Royal Irish Academy in 1785.
257	Was lodged in Paris by Sir John Fitzgerald in the time of James II. In 1787, through the Abbé Kearney of Paris, it was sent to the Royal Irish Academy.
270	A printed book: 'Breviarium sec. usum Sarum.' A.D. 1494. Printed by Peter Levet.
272	Noted as missing in 1742.
345	Commonplace book; identification uncertain.
346	,, ,, ,, ,,
347	Has the old press-marks.
383	Missing in 1742.
416	In the Marquess of Bute's Library. Bulkeley collated it for Mill, so it was probably lost through being lent to him for that purpose.
443	One of five volumes claimed, about 1800, as belonging to the office of the Auditor-General.
523	Claimed by Auditor-General. (See 443.)
525	,, ,, ,, ,,
531	Noted as missing in 1688.
533	,, ,, 1742. Recovered in 1850.
572	,, ,, 1702.
703	In Bernard's 'Catalogus,' 6, is 'Pet. Blesensis et Rathramni Epistolae.' This is an error arising from the misreading of a heading. There are no letters of Rathramnus in the volume.
849	The original MS. of Bedell's Irish Bible (O. T.) belonged to Archbishop Marsh, and the earlier part (to Canticles) is now in Marsh's Library, Dublin, together with a copy of the remainder. In this copy is a note by the Archbishop stating that the original had been left in the hands of Provost Huntingdon some time before 1688, and was sometime after that in the College Library 'as appears by the Catalogue of the Manuscripts of the said Colledge printed in the large catalogue of manuscript books published at Oxford, being now unhapily lost' (see Bernard, No. 1987). It is now in the Library of Cambridge University which acquired it with Bishop Moore's Library in 1715.
1340	In Bernard's time, 1340 sqq. were in the possession of Dr. John Madden. They were given to the College by Bishop John Stearne in 1741. In the 'Catalogus,' 1340 is succeeded by 1641.

Short Poems by Donne, Wotton, and others.

Appears to have consisted originally of 565 pp. Eight leaves have been lost. The first 293 pp. contain the Poems of John Donne, contained in the edition Lond. 1669 from p. 1 to p. 364, with a few exceptions and with some variations. There are also some anonymous poems, and two by R. Corbet and Fr. Beaumont respectively. The second part of the volume consists of poems assigned to various authors, including Visc. St. Alban's ('The world's a bubble, and the life of man Lest [sic] then a spann'; printed, with variations, in Reliquiæ Wottonianæ, 1651, p. 358, with signature, Ignoto); James I. (on the death of Queen Anne); Sir H. Wotton, Cecil Turner, W. Browne, Geo. Herbert, Lord Herbert, Fras. Beaumont, Humphrey Hide, and others, with many anonymous. See Dr. Grosart's 'Literary Finds.' In many instances the poems are assigned to other authors than those in whose works they have been published. Of the 'Dialogue' in Chambers' Donne, i. 69, the first three stanzas are here assigned to the Earl of Pembroke and Sir H. Wotton, the last three to Sir B. Ruddiard and Dr. John Donne.

There are also some prose pieces, a Latin elegiac poem by R. Aton, and some Latin epigrams.

Vol. 12 contains Coins chiefly of the Netherlands, from Diederick (Teodoric) the VIIth (12th cent.) to Philip II., with figures, nearly all engraved, and full historical illustrations.

Vol. 13 contains legends of Coins and Medals from 1477 to 1648.

Vol. 14 consists of registers, list of Princes, Dukes, Bishops, etc.

Vol. 15 is entitled 'D'Afcompste soo van des Vaders als van des Moeders sy van den . . . Keyser Carel de vijffde.

The first half of the volume contains Coins and Medals of Charles V. and his ancestors. The second part contains Medals, etc., of Philip II., with others illustrating the history of the Netherlands from 1556 to 1629.

There is much historical matter in the illustrative descriptions.

Records of the Roman Inquisition and Dataria.

These MSS. are in three groups; the first consists of twelve volumes containing copies of pontifical briefs and bulls from Boniface IX. to Pius VI., and a small volume of Clement XIII. Such copies are not uncommon in Italian libraries. These probably came from the Roman Dataria or Chancery.

The second group, consisting of nineteen volumes, contains the genuine original sentences of the Holy Office, chiefly for heresy, but also for sorcery and bigamy, beginning with the year 1564 and ending 1659.

The third group, consisting of thirty-five volumes, contains details of proceedings for witchcraft, heresy, blasphemy, and (clerical and monastic) immorality in various provincial courts of the Inquisition in Italy with other documents. These have been forwarded to Rome for a final decision, which is generally endorsed on them. In the following notices advantage has been taken of Dr. Karl Benrath's articles in the 'Rivista Cristiana,' 1879, 1880, Sig. Ugo Balzani's article (see note) has also been referred to.[1]

Series I. Copies of Pontifical Briefs and Bulls, some of which are published in the Bullarium Romanum, 'ma altre utili vuoi a completarle, vuoi a controllarle,' Benrath.

Vol. 1. (begins imperfect fol. 5), Boniface IX., an. 1389.

Vol. 2. Eugenius IV., an. 1434. On a flyleaf is, 'liber secundus de Beneficiis vacantibus'; 'Rubricatus per me Johannem Bevenatum.' Lettered on the edge, 'De beneficiis vacantibus, anno IIII Eugenii $\widetilde{pp}$. IIII^{ti}.

Vol. 3. Eugenius IV., an. 1439. Primus de Regn^{bus} (regentibus) et exh̄dis anno VIIII° Eug. $\widetilde{pp}$. 4^{ti}. 'Nicolaus rubricavit, 1441.'

[1] These Records were, with a vast number of others, amounting to about 400 tons, removed from Rome to Paris, by order of Napoleon I., in 1809, in accordance with his plan of collecting the archives of all the conquered countries in Paris. At the Restoration the great majority of the volumes were returned to Rome. Of the volumes so returned, those that contained the proceedings of the Holy Office were sold to the paper makers after they had been torn 'in minutissimi pezzi,' and were immersed in the water intended for their maceration in the presence of Monsignor Marino Marini. The quantity thus destroyed may be estimated from the amount received from the paper makers, which was 4300 francs ('Regestum Clementis Papae V., Romae, 1885, vol. i., Prolegomena, p. cclxxii, quoted by Sig. Ugo Balzani, Rendiconti della R. Acad. dei Lincei, vol. iv., fasc. 12, 'Di Alcuni Documenti, etc.')

How the present volumes became separated from the others is not known; they were, however, purchased by the Duke of Manchester in 1841. From him they were bought (through Rev. Rich. Gibbings) by Rev. C. W. Wall, Vice-Provost, who presented them to the Library in 1854. The fullest account of them is that given by Karl Benrath, 'Ueber die Quellen der Italienischen Reformationsgeschichte,' Bonn, 1876, and in the 'Historische Zeitschrift,' 1879, and the 'Rivista Cristiana,' vol. vii., 1879, vol. viii., 1880.

Vol. 4. Pius II., an. 1463, 'secundus de Beneficiis vacan. Pii pp. ii. anno quinto.'

Vol. 5. Innocent VIII., an. 1489. Lettered on the edge, 'Secundus de vacan. anno sexto dni. Innocentii Papae VIII.'

Vol. 6. Alexander VI., an. 1492–1496.

Vol. 7. Clement VII., an. 1530.

Vol. 8. Paul IV., 1556. Lettered on the edge, II. A.II.D. Pavli IIII.

Vol. 9. Pius IV., 1561–2 (begins from 29, and wants ff. 150–172). Lettered on the edge, 'II. Perpet. Pii IIII.'

Vol. 10. Benedict XIV., 1745 (wants ff. 41–60, and 161–179, 220–239, 322–340, 540–560, 'Liber viii Anni V. ssmi D. nri Benedicti, PP. xiiii.'

Vol. 11. Pius VI., 1778 and (at end) 1777, 'Liber Tertius Anni Quarti SSmi Dm Nri Pii PP. VI.'

Vol. 12. Pius VI., 1784–87, 'Liber Quintus Anni Duodecimi SSmi D.N. Pii PP. VI.' The 'Quintus' is corrected from 'Primus,' and 'duodecimi' from 'Tertiodecimi.' Similar corrections at the beginning of every 21st folio.

Vol. 13. Two Fragments, viz. Lib. 2, Anni VI., SSmi D. N. Clementis XIII., ff. 1–20; and [Anni IX.] ff. 562–579.

f. 139. Fr. Eliseus Tertius, ord. S. Franc. Bergamo, condemned as vehemently suspected of heresy for practising sorcery, 'magnetem baptizando,' etc. Sentenced to three years in the galleys of Venice, or if he is considered unable to endure that, five years' imprisonment.

f. 142. Aurelius and Joh. Bapt. de Mosconibus, not appearing, are condemned as pertinacious heretics, and as such expelled 'a foro ecclesiastico,' and delivered to the secular arm, their effigies to be burned and their goods confiscated.

f. 184. Margarita la Mora has been denounced by credible witnesses as a witch (lamia) 'quod (maleficiis) quendam puerum dicti loci offenderit atque pluribus aliis personis minata fuerit maleficia. Quae in carceribus detenta et examinata, omnia semper negavit; quare de consilio peritorum sufficienter torta, nihil amplius confessa est, sed semper in negatione perstitit, et de eodem consilio relaxata fuit et dimissa.' On the same fol. another similar case.

f. 298. Copia sententiae contra Aurelium Nanarinum Bonon. magistrum ludi litterarii Vergati, traditum Bracchio seculari.

There is the usual intercession, 'rogantes tamen et efficaciter dictam curiam secularem quatenus citra sanguinis effusionem et mortis periculum suam sententiam moderetur.' f. 297. contains the (original) letter from Fra Nicolò da Oderzo, notary of the Inquisition at Bologna, to Cardinal Savelli, accompanying this copy. It begins: 'Per ordine del M.R.P. Inquisitore nostro, mando a V.S. Ill^ma^ la copia delle abiurationi et sententie date contra Aurelio Nanarino relapso che fu abbrugiato uno di questi giorni in piazza.'

ff. 332–352. Report of cases before Jac. Azzarolus da Lugo, specially delegated by the Holy See to Parma, Piacenza, etc., to examine cases of heresy, 1578. Some of the accused are sisters of the order of S. Augustine in Piacenza, one of whom is charged with saying, inter alia, that she did not believe in indulgences or jubilees, the only object of indulgences being to gain money.

f. 369. 'Stephanus de Arbo . . . per annos viginti sanctissimam Eucharistiae Sacramentum sub utraque specie pluribus ex tuis parochianis . . . et quod impium ac nephandissimum est cum tu vinum non consecratum pro consecrato infirmis tradideris illos et astantes idololatriam admittere fecisti, hereticali libro Sclavonica lingua impresso in administratione . . . usum fuisse,' etc., 'postremo in gravi et turpi concubinatus peccato per annos triginta et ultra permansisti.' Imprisonment for five years.

f. 377. Baptista di Pagelli, a relapsed heretic delivered to the power of the Secular Courts, 'da esser punito secondo le legitime sanzioni.'

f. 388. Richard Thorne of London (Inquisition of Milan).

f. 411 sqq. Proceedings of a specially delegated Inquisitor General in Cremona against several persons, one deceased, viz. Andrea Lutio, whose bones are to be 'desepulte come fetide et . . . getate in loco profano; (f. 414). Mag. Nicolo Boschetti, relapsed. Condemned 'esser perpetualmente murato nel luogo da noi assignatoti ove habbi da finire il restante della tua vita, etc.'

Vol. 4. Sentences and abjurations for the year 1582.

f. 88. Alessandro Sorleoni, chierico, Vicar of the Bp. of Savona, is deprived as being a favourer of heretics. It is stated that he had received some of them into his house, especially one who was a fugitive from the Holy Office; moreover, he had imprisoned some who had abjured and been dismissed by the Inquisitor of Genoa, and had questioned them about the heresies they had confessed, excommunicating those who did not produce the process of the Inquisitor against them, and those who did not appear before the Bishop of Savona, although they had been commanded by the Inquisitor not to appear.

English and Scottish names are: f. 45. Wm. Patmer, London. 'Reum inquisitum et carceratum super crimine haeresis, ac confessum quod quosdam assertae Reginae Angliae leges contrarias s^tae^ fidei Cath^cae^ observaverit; quod inservierit eorum templis praesertim psalmos concinendo haereticorum more . . . quod Catechismum haereticum Anglicanum legerit, et alios haereticos libros.' To be detained in a place to be assigned, etc. f. 48. Rich. Lister, the elder, Cumberland, 'reum inquisitum et carceratum, etc.' (one of whose errors was reading the Bible in English, translated by the heretics). To be detained in a place to be assigned. f. 56. Rich. Sporto, of Chester, aet. 25 (lightly suspected of heresy). Confesses that, although born of Catholic parents, he had at the age of 14 once participated in the 'Cena degli heretici,' but had never believed as they believe). f. 57. Thos. Busbridge of Temne, Canterbury. f. 130. Jas. Crichton, Dundee (of mixed parentage), 'reum inquisitum et carceratum . . . ac confessum,' 'quod . . . didicerit memoriter . . . Calvini haeresiarchae Catechismum, ac crediderit in eo contenta esse vera, et in specie quod duo tantum essent Sacramenta.' Abjuration subjoined. To be imprisoned. f. 222. John Foster of Warwick, 'reum inquisitum et carceratum de et super depredatione navium Christianorum et crimine haeresis, ac confessum quod cum tempore foelicis recordationis Mariae reginae Angliae vixisset Catholicé attamen, etc.' Abjuration subjoined. The galleys during pleasure. f. 226. Jas. Chippee of Somerton, '. . . de et super depraedatione navium Christianorum et crimine haeresis ac confessum quod quamvis Religionem Catholicam . . . contrariam Religioni Helisabettae assertae Reginae Angliae et a patre singulariter didicisset quod esset bonum orare pro mortuis et a vetulis laudari audivisset celebrationem Sacrae Missae attamen postea, etc.' 'Militavit contra Catholicos in Gallia.' 'Can-tarit psalmos eo modo quo cantant haeretici Genevenses, etc.' Abjuration subjoined. The galleys during pleasure. f. 205. Benjamin Underwood of Exeter (voluntary). f. 232. Robert Brown of London. To be imprisoned. f. 235. Robert Green of Lincoln, ditto. f. 240. Thos. Godfrey of Norwich, ditto. f. 244. Edw. Clark of Bristol (similar to Foster's case, f. 222, the galleys). f. 247. Christopher Foster of Dover (similar offence and sentence). f. 210. Edw. Selman of Brutton dio. Bath (similar). f. 252. Thos. Lutton, or Louton, of Egremont, dio. Carlisle (similar). f. 256. Thos. Vincent of Balem, dio. Norwich (similar offence), and 'quod psalmos cantavit haereticorum Anglicorum more': the galleys. f. 259. Daniel Gagger of Stowmarket (similar). f. 263. Wm. Connon of London, 'reum super crimine heresis inquisitum, carceratum ac confessum, etc.' Perpetual imprisonment, on condition of abjuration, which, as usual, is subjoined. f. 267. Matthew Gibbons of London, 'reum inquisitum et carcer. ac confessum quod educatus fuerit iuxta impias leges praetensae Reginae Angliae, etc.' Imprisonment. f. 271. Wm. Robinson of Chester. f. 305. Henry Suchi of Wibunbury, Chester, 'carcerato . . . et più volte essaminato, hai finalmente confessato' (inter alia had believed that there were only three sacraments, the third being matrimony). f. 308. Philip Loune of Southampton (voluntary). f. 312. Gilbert Burne of London ('più volte essaminato'). f. 315. Edmond Archbold of Rylryral, dio. Dublin (voluntary). In every case the abjuration is subjoined. There are also some cases of persons who, having been captives to the Turks, had conformed to Mohammedanism, and who presented themselves voluntarily, alleging that they had never denied, or in their hearts rejected, the Christian faith; also a case of sorcery.

Vol. 5. Sentences and abjurations for the year 1603.

f. 271. Ottavio Cesarani, continually celebrating Mass and performing other sacerdotal offices, being only a subdeacon. Delivered to the Secular Court, i.e. the Governor of Rome.

f. 349. Bartholomeus Perettus Marsorum Episcopus. Communicating with a sorcerer, 'tum pro sciendis occultis tum pro habendo commercio hostis humani generis, et (quod aiunt) spiritu familiari obtinendo.' A mago quodam, 'acceperat ampullam plenam liquoris ad doemonem (sic) inibi alligatum colloquendum aptati, etc.' Suspended (after abjuration) from his office and from the exercise of any holy orders for ten years, and further at pleasure, and to be formally imprisoned in the office of the Inquisition for the same period.

British names are :

f. 5. George Duff de civitate Elliae Provinciae Morensis in regno Scotiae (voluntary).

f. 191. Robert Gore of Kimbolton aet. 20 (voluntary).

f. 303. Christopher Jennings of London (voluntary).

f. 430. Edward Swan of Langden (ditto).

There are several cases of sorcery and of conformity to Mohammedanism.

Vol. 6. The sentences and abjurations of 1607.

f. 44 is the sentence against Franciscum Michel fil. q. Honfredi cognomento Windler of Eston, in the diocese of Northampton. Amongst the charges are 'Quod hereticos impense laudaveris et dixeris Foxium quendam Anglum hereticum qui pseudomartyrum hereticorum martirologium scripsit fuisse virum valde probum, Catholicos Anglos a q. praetensa Regina Elisabetta iam pridem pro fide occisos omnes fuisse proditores, et nequaquam religione, sed pro suis proditionibus interfectos, teque id certo scire eo quod eorum examinibus interfueris. Hereticos pro suis heresibus in Anglia olim a Regina Maria damnatos ac morti traditos fuisse martires constantissimos. Insignem illum hereticum annis elapsis Romae combustum, ob sacrilegum facinus contra eucharistiam commissum fuisse martirem. . . . Te ex parentibus hereticis natum et in Anglicana protestantium secta educatum et instructum fuisse, omniaque ideo quae ipsi protestantes heretici credunt olim credidisse. . . . Ecclesiam Catholicam esse illam Anglicanam.'

'Verum cum ante annos septem esses in Irlandia, Catholici sacerdotis suasu Catholicum effectum predictas opiniones et hereses reliquisse, et ejusdem sacerdotis ministerio ab excommunicatione absolutum et in gremium sanctae matris ecclesiae clam fuisse receptum, etc.' Therefore he is released from all censures which he had incurred, certain penances being imposed, 19th Feb., 1607.

fol. 194. Sentence against Stefano Perino figliuolo del q. Pietro Blani a Verò Diocesi di Lione in Francia dell' età d' anni 17.

On the 20th March, 1606, he had abjured the heresies of the sect of Calvin, and had been prescribed certain penances, but soon after was denounced, charged with saying, on the 22nd of the same month, that these penances were bagatelles and of no value, with showing by his words that he did not believe that heretics were in a state of damnation, with scorning confession, etc. As he denied the charges on oath, 'dicendo d' esser buon Christiano fù necessario venir controdite al rigoroso essame, nel quale nendimeno costituto, niente de novo aggiungesti à tuoi primi detti.' He is, therefore, vehemently suspected of heresy, and is required to abjure every heresy and sect, 'che contradica alla S^ta^ Catolica et Apostolica Romana Chiesa.' On this condition he is condemned to formal imprisonment in the Holy Office as long as the Cardinal Inquisitors think fit, and certain penances imposed. In his abjuration, which is subjoined, he declares that 'da che son fatto Catolico sempre ho creduto, credo adesso, et con l'aiuto di Dio credero sempre per l'avenire tutto quello che crede predica et insegna la S^ta^ Catolica et Apostolica Romana Chiesa,' 16 Mai, 1607.

f. 198. Sentence against Joannes f. Joannis Scoti de loco Todrie Provinciae Tundaliae (qu. Haddington) in Regno Scotiae æt. 21. He presents himself of his own accord and deposes, that having been born of Calvinist parents and brought up by them in Calvinism, he has hitherto held certain heresies. His abjuration wholly written in his own hand is subjoined, and the usual penances are imposed, 17 Mai, 1607.

f. 277. Sentence against Marco Antonio Capello, of the order of Minorites, one of the seven authors of the treatise entitled, 'Trattato dell' Interdetto della S^ta^ di di Papa Paolo V.,' in which the cause of Venice was defended against the Pope. After abjuration, he is to publish a book revoking his errors, etc., 11th July, 1607. His abjuration is added.

Vol. 7. Sentences and abjurations of [half] the year 1615. There is an index prefixed which contains references extending as far as fol. 659, but the present volume ends with fol. 307, 20th June, 1615.

Most of the cases in this volume are of converts, born of heretic parents, who present themselves spontaneously. In such cases certain slight penances are imposed.

There are also cases of persons who confess that they have practised sorcery. These are dealt with as under slight suspicion of heresy, namely of believing in the lawfulness of such practices. Sentence in one case, seven years in the galleys (fol. 147).

So also a criminal who is in prison under a capital charge, having made it known that he had committed bigamy, is brought before the Holy Office, and on his confession pronounced to be under vehement suspicion of heresy, viz. of believing it to be lawful to take a second wife while the first is living (fol. 109).

There are also cases of persons who having been taken prisoners by the Turks had professed Mohammedanism, but had afterwards escaped, and who spontaneously present themselves, declaring that they had never with their lips denied the Christian religion. These are under vehement suspicion of apostasy (ff. 41, 61).

f. 305 is the case of one Lorenzo Cavaccio of the order of Preachers, who had celebrated Mass without having any holy orders (to which he was admitted later). He was subjected to torture by the Holy Office at Modena, and denying the charge was released. Having left Italy he sends his confession, supplicating that on his spontaneously presenting himself he may be received. He is regarded as under slight suspicion of heresy, viz. believing that one not ordained can consecrate the bread and wine and convert them into the body and blood of the Lord. His request was granted.

ff. 199–208 contain the case of Carlo, son of Prince Ferrante Gonzaga, voluntarily appearing, condemned for sorcery and murder (two, one of a man who refused to give him a book in which were bound the seven spirits of the days of the week; another of one who he feared would denounce him). He is sentenced to be relegated to a place to be assigned by the Inquisition, and to pay a fine of 8000 scudi.

Amongst the converts there appear from the British Isles: Maurice, son of Robert Gryffin of O'Gunilog, dioc. Bangor (f. 17); John, son of Thos. Randeel, Durham (21); Jeffrey Davies of London (29); John Hepburn of St. Andrews (227); James Hamilton of Edinburgh (105); John Forbes of Clunie, in Dunkeld; Wm. Elis, or Ellers, of Lincoln (283); Robert Forster of Kalmon, dioc. Dublin in Scotia (f. 37, perhaps an error for Dunblane); Robert Gray, sacerdos professus Ord. Min. de Obs. Ref. f. Onfredi. He had taken the oath of allegiance in order to escape imprisonment (f. 313). The Index contains also the names of George Tindal of York; John Crassin of Exeter; Presb. Petrus Perchinius (Perkins) of Limerick; John Jones (Gions) of Bangor.

Vol. 8. Sentences and abjurations of the year 1628.

Like the former contains only the first half of the year, ending 16th June with fol. 297. Several folios are displaced in the binding, and 187 to 198 are wanting.

f. 7. Case of an Irish priest, Thadeus Donsleve O'Farii (O'Farrihy) of Skreen, Tuam; 'paupertate impulsus convenisti dominum Collegii haereticorum in civitate Dublin.' He had lived 'extrinsecus more haereticorum,' but never in his heart doubted of the Catholic religion. His examination is in the third series, vol. 3, fol. 929. (Both publ. by Gibbings, Dublin, 1868.)

f. 57. Anna Wilson of Langniddry, dioc. St. Andrews, Scotland, wife of James O'Grady Hib. (Her examination in the third series, vol. 3, f. 859).

f. 143. John Riley of Tattenhall, Staffordshire. (His examination appears in the third series, vol. 3, f. 907.)

f. 165. Anna Ballach of Limerick, æt. 16, of mixed parentage (see 3rd Series, vol. 3, f. 860).

f. 209. Case of a priest who had become perverted, but now spontaneously presents himself and abjures his heresy.

Vol. 9. (numbered within, vol. 1301) Proceedings, 1635 to 1639, not chronologically arranged. This volume contains denunciations, examinations, etc., and should therefore be assigned to the third series. There are included sundry papers containing charms, etc., found on the accused. One of the charms is on vellum, 'le parole che mando l'Imperator Carlo, et sono provate.' There is a copy of the same on paper. Also prayers to Saint Daniel and Saint Martha, with engraved pictures of them, 1637.

Vol. 10. Sentences and abjurations in 1650; heresy, polygamy, sorcery.

f. 368. M. A. Ciaffoni, secular priest, appears voluntarily, and confesses that 'ho abusato il sacramento della Penitenza, etc.' He is adjudged to be vehemently suspected of heresy. f. 158. Dan. Solby of York. f. 250. John Walpole of London. f. 292. Rob. Curtis of Yarmouth. f. 400. Gilb. Butler of Crean, Ireland (all voluntarily).

Vol. 11. Sentences, etc., of the year 1651; chiefly for sorcery, but also for heresy, bigamy, etc. There are also several professions of the orthodox faith on the part of Oriental 'schismatics.'

f. 271. Giovanni Morellati, for celebrating Mass not being in holy orders, is vehemently suspected of heresy, i.e. of believing this to be lawful. (Appeared voluntarily).

f. 19. Raffel Wood of Chester. f. 55. William Adnam of Tantony. f. 59. John Clerk of Torrington. f. 249. Thos. Ramsay of Leith (all voluntary).

Vol. 12. Sentences, etc., of the year 1657, chiefly for sorcery.

Several musicians are condemned for having gone from Italy to the service of the Queen of Sweden; one is condemned to imprisonment during pleasure; the others who appeared voluntarily are subjected to light penances (ff. 19, 45, 75, 121, 133).

Josephum de Asola ord. min. observ. qui dimisso habitu sub nomine Francisci Monterni uxorem duxit,' 1631 (Sentenced to ten years in the galleys). There are other similar cases, and several of sorcery and charms. At the end of the volume are 21 ff. of the year 1711, containing proceedings against sisters of the convent of the Annunciation, in Tuderto, for sorcery.

1249

Vol. 7. 1636 to 1711. The vol. begins with f. 272, an. 1636, a case of sorcery in Rome (the incriminated charms are enclosed); but after f. 287 a fresh numeration begins, and the documents are from the provinces, Naples, Perugia, Piacenza, etc.

Vol. 8. 1672 to 1690. Chiefly Ancona and Siena. The earliest date seems to be that of 1672. f. 199. It is preceded by papers bearing date 1690. After f. 211 is a title, 'Index Volum. 2255.' This is a short table of Contents of the remainder of this volume, which consists—first, of the proceedings in the case of Frà Antonio Francesco de Candelari, of Ancona, a Capuchin priest, author of books entitled, 'Regula Perfectionis continens breve et lucidum compendium totius vitae spiritualis,' and 'Regola di perfettione, etc.' He is called a Quietist, and is alleged to have founded a society called 'La notte oscura,' or 'La compagnia della Volonta di Dio.' The first document is dated 1672, the last 1690. These begin f. 184. Secondly, ff. 225 to 302 are occupied with copies of letters from many other Quietists.

Vol. 9. 1696–1710, Ancona, etc.

ff. 1 to 123 consists of informations, etc., on the matter of the Quietists at Ancona, 1696. f. 122 (bound after 65) is 'Resultato dal (sic) processo informativo.'

f. 125. 'Contra Sororem Ursulam Laviniam Tertiariam ord. min. ob praetensas blasphemias hereticales,' 1706.

Vol. 15 (ex vol. 2543) Spoleto, 1699 et 1701. Informatio de vita et moribus necnon de conceptu et fama Theclae Baldini seu sororis Catharinae de Passione (Priora della casa delle Penitenti di Spoleti) in materia d' affettata Santità.

Copia scriptorum circa seipsam a Thecla Baldini.

The first numbered folio is 338, but this is preceded by 26 folios containing an account written 1713. Amongst the assertions made about Thecla were that she subsisted for long periods without other food than the consecrated wafer, and this not every day: to this there were many witnesses; she also said that she saw visions which she describes. It was alleged that she distributed to the sick a certain 'acqua della Madonna della Quercia,' in which were odours.

Between ff. 435, 436 are three papers inserted: 1°. Informations dated 14 June, 1716, that a certain painter had portraits of the aforesaid Thecla now dead, and by some persons regarded as a saint; and fear is expressed that these pictures may be made objects of worship. 2°. The examination of the painter. 3°. Letter of the local inquisitor accompanying these. 4°. Declaration on oath of Anna de Spoleto, monialis questuatrix Monasterii Passionis Convertitarum, that on a former examination she had sworn falsely, having been previously instructed by Thecla what to say, and made to swear that she would say no otherwise. She had also broken the oath of silence imposed by the Inquisitors. The letters in which these documents were enclosed for transmission to Rome are added.

Salutianum ad quod electus fuit, praetextu quum non sit subditus status Ducis Sabaudiae.

Signorili was sentenced to the galleys for three years. He has also been sentenced to death by the Secular Court for homicide, and the Vicar-General of the Inquisition writes for instructions, 28 Oct., 1698. The sentence is changed to five years' imprisonment, but meanwhile he has been found hanged from a grating in the prison, f. 222. This leads to further inquiry, ff. 133–228.

Vol. 18. Spoleto, Ancona, Venoza, etc., 1632–1710.

1. f. 82 (first existing). Spoleto, 1711. Contra Alderanum Gulfi Advocatum Fiscalem S. Officii in Terra Saxiferrato de pnso Insultu in Concionatorem d^{i}. Saxiferati ('nihilum contra ipsum resultat').

ff. 114 to 324 wanting.

2. f. 325. (35) Ancona, 1711. Contra pnsum Attentatum factum ab Haebreis . . . contra Antonium Venturam Bonafortuna puerum Christianum.

The child, about three years of age, had disappeared in Holy Week, and the rumour had been started that he was detained in the Jewish quarter, and it was proposed to burn it. Next day, however, the child was found in the cistern in a tanyard belonging to a Christian. However, another mother being heard lamenting that she could not find her son (7 years old), the same project was again set on foot. This child was found outside one of the gates of the city. The first document is a memorial to the Pope from the Hebrew community in Ancona, in which they recount the briefs that had been issued by former Popes for their protection, excommunicating those who propagated such calumnies, also letters of Sforza, Duke of Milan, of the Emperor Charles V., of the Republic of Venice, etc. The latest instance mentioned (prior to the present) is of 1705, in Venice, when a picture was found representing Hebrews killing a Christian child. Copies of some of these documents are enclosed, also a printed pamphlet, entitled: 'Alla sagra consulta Illustriss: e Reverendiss: Monsig. Ghezzi Ponente per l'Università degl' Hebrei di Roma Memoriale. In Roma Nella Stamperia della Rev. Camera Apostolica 1706 [altered to 1705]'; 4to, 6 ff. with Sommario, 4 ff., also: 'Memoriale Additionale ad altro dato li 26 Settembre, 1705,' 8 ff.

3. f. 421. (130) Teano, 1710. Contra D. Antonium de Mattheis Sacerdotem Secularem, pnsum Sortilegum; D. Thomam de Dionisio Sac. Sec.; D. Thomam de Andreolo Clericum Secularem; Alessandrum de Silvestris; Agatham Nard: Isabellam de Liguoris.

ff. 495 to 530 wanting.

4. f. 531. (205) Venosa, 1632–3. Contra frem Franciscum Soldatum Bononiens. ord. min. obs. de quo alias. The first document is a letter from the Bp. of Molfetta representing that Franc. Soldati had been sentenced by the Abbot of S. Germano to five years' imprisonment, and, although this term had expired, he is very ill-treated, and from this cause has become mad (24 July, 1632). The Bishop forwards a statement from which it appears that Soldati had been tortured and sentenced to five years' imprisonment in consequence of certain writings (containing secrets 'qualificati ad amorem odium mortem') found on him, 'é sono passati li cinque anni, e se trova crodelmente fabricato trà quattro mura, senza ascoltare mai messa, è per un' buco con un' portello che si serra à chiave si li dà da magnare, che questa non è l'intentione ni ordine della sacra congregatione, sta il detto devenuto matto.' According to the endorsement he had been sentenced, 13 Sept., 1628, so that the five years had not expired. However, the rest of the sentence is remitted, but his history does not end here. He claimed to be perpetual Vicar of Jesus Christ, and on the 8th March, 1633, it is ordered that he be sent in bonds to Rome. The papers which he asserted to have been dictated by Jesus Christ and the Virgin Mary are inserted. For a summary of the case see Gibbings: 'Case of a Minorite Friar, etc.,' 1853, p. 17, note.

Prefixed to this volume is a table of Contents headed 'vol. 2679.' Of the items included in this table and referred to the ff. noted here as wanting, three are found in vol. 14 of this collection, namely, Nos. 2, 3, 4. The others are: Florence: Fr. Ant. Franc. Sassi ord. min. de obs. pnsus sollicitans; and Perugia: Sor. Ang^{a} Cat^{a} de Fabris Monialis in Mon. St. Annunc. Tuderti pnsa Sortilega. The last No. (4) is clearly out of place.

Vol. 27. Venice, Spain, 1722–1755.

1. Circa l'Assistenza nel dominio veneto, e Una relazione del P. Rmo Lucini sopra il preteso concordato; a collection of documents and precedents relating to the controversy between the Inquisition and the Republic of Venice, including (printed) 'Proclama pubblicato per deliberatione dell' Eccelso Conseglio di Dieci, Adi (sic) 25 Agosto, 1723, in Materia de Furti Sacrilegi commessi nelle Publiche Chiese.'

Vol. 28. Civita Vecchia, 1768–1784.

1. Is a complaint against a familiar of the Holy Office for uprooting a neighbour's hedge. There follows a petition from certain galley slaves complaining of the inhumanity with which they are treated. There are several petitions of the same kind both from individual galley slaves and from groups. One complains that he believes his confessor has revealed his confession.

Vol. 29. Civita Vecchia, 1783–1795.

1. Complaints against Vincenzo de Angelis Cancelliere di S. Offizio, for acting as Chancellor substitute under the Civil Government, also for fraud.

There follow various denunciations for blasphemy, sorcery, and other offences in the galleys; f. 60, a humble petition of Eugenio di Carlo Pocchi, who has been 17 years in the galleys (after 8 in prison) 'per pretesa estrazione di scudi cinque olio.'

f. 62. A complaint of the priest Giuseppe Gatt of Malta, resident in Civita Vecchia, against Vincenzo Natali, familiar of the Holy Office and executor of Niccola Moscat, for detaining certain money due to him under Moscat's will, a copy of which is enclosed in an 'Elengo di alcune cause civili de Patentati, etc.' It appears to be decided that Natali, as a simple familiar, is not exempt from the jurisdiction of the Civil Courts.

f. 74. Letter from Fr. Vincenzo Controversi, Vicario, respecting a parcel of books from Perugia to be despatched to Naples. All the books but three he knows to be permitted; these three he sends. The original invoice is enclosed (1787).

f. 84. List of consuls resident in Civita Vecchia. These are followed by further papers concerning de Angelis.

f. 114. Complaint from Vetralla against D. Gian Domenico Cima, Arciprete della Cathedrale and Vicario foraneo per la Curia Vescovile di Viterbo, respecting his arrest and imprisonment of 'il Chierico Stefano Nardini.' It is alleged that the Arciprete wrongly used the name of the Holy Office (1789).

f. 169. Complaint of certain Zelanti of Civita Vecchia that Thomas Grasselli, who has been appointed Cancelliere in the place of his brother (removed for official delinquency), not being a notary, many persons, and those not merely the ignorant, consider that an oath taken before him has no force, and its violation is a mere lie.

f. 170. Complaint of many galley slaves that the under warders of the galleys connive at all sorts of offences; that owing to the neglect of the chaplains there is no mass, and in short, 'li poveri forzati vivono come le Bestie senza nessuna assistenza tanto in vita, tanto in punto di morte; benche stiamo in luogo di castigo, siamo Cristiani.'

f. 180. Proceedings against Giov. Vinc. Toraca for language used in the public café respecting the Holy Office, and proceedings thereon.

f. 197. Complaint of the Vicar of the Holy Office respecting a perquisition made in the house of an officer of the Inquisition without any authority from the Vicar, with proceedings thereon (1790).

f. 230. Concerning abuses connected with the Pontifical crews in Civita Vecchia, 1795.

ff. 226 and 242. Concerning the arrest, by order of the Secretary of State, of Vincenzo Valentine, Avvocato de' Rei del S. Off. (1795). He was arrested for detaining the passport of the captain of a certain vessel; a question having arisen about the crews.

f. 251. A letter from Maddalena Franceschi, farmer of the letter post of Civita Vecchia, respecting the exemption of letters not properly belonging to the Holy Office.

f. 258. Concerning the impounding and sale of certain horses, etc., belonging to an official of the Inquisition, he not having the right of pasture. Appended is a printed statement of the case with copy of the law relating to such cases (1795).

Vol. 30. Rimini, Malta, Venice, etc., 1632, 1721–1789.

f. 8. Papers relating to the church of S. Simon and S. Jude in Rimini (Il Sacerd. Carlo Joli Arciprete della Chiesa), injured by the earthquake of 1786 (1787). Other papers occur later in this volume, and in vol. 20 and vol. 31.

f. 1. Controversy between the Canonici della Collegiata di Cartocceto and the Vicar of the Holy Office as to their alleged privilege of holding the procession and benediction of the palms on the feast of S. Peter, Martyr (1788).

f. 81. Pesaro. Concerning the suspension of the patent of Angelo Gasparini da Candelara (1787).

f. 94. Malta. Concerning outrages of certain Corsairs on the monastery and inhabitants of Patmos, 1632.

f. 112. Petrella, 1788. Denunciation of D. Andrea Santucci ob sollicitationem in confessione. Prefixed is a letter from Petr. Ant. Biudi, Parroco, beginning: 'Ne detestabile sollicitationis crimen inultum impunitumque dimittatur ut saepe accidit, etc.

f. 134. Savignano, 1789. Concerning a complaint against Pietro Belli, mandatory of the Holy Office.

Rimini, 1787. Correspondence respecting application for aid to repair the Rimini office, injured by the earthquake.

Bergamo, 1787. Correspondence about the sale of property in Paderno belonging to the Holy Office.

f. 171. Rimini, 1788. Memorial from inhabitants of Rimini complaining that, in consequence of the grave disorders produced by the Bishop Fersetti, there is danger that great part of the city and diocese may fall into heresy. The city having suffered from earthquake, hail, and drought, he has prohibited the procession of the statue of Madonna dell' Acqua, which has always miraculously produced rain or fine weather as needed. There was also a miraculous crucifix which, in procession to and from Loretto, used to be received with demonstrations of devotion, etc., and the bishop had forbidden its entrance except on condition that it remained enclosed in its case; he had also threatened to imprison the appellants. The memorial further charges him with immorality.

f. 182. Venice, 1725. Letter from the local inquisitor, stating that he has learned extrajudicially that there are many cases of grave offences with abuse of the Sacraments, etc., which have not been brought before the Holy Office in consequence of the neglect or complicity of the confessors.

f. 188. Venice, 1721. Prohibition of 'Instruzione in forma di Catechismo' by the Bp. of Montpelier, translated into Italian.

f. 189. Copy of Decree of Alexander VII. directing that a register be kept.

f. 192. Rimini, 1788. Further papers about the application of Arciprete Joli and the church of SS. Simon and Jude.

f. 218. Venice and Padua, 1728. Papers relating to the sale and exchange of a certain house belonging to the Holy Office.

f. 227. Rimino, 1787. Memorial from the widow Fiora Pagliavani in reference to money due to her husband by the family Belli, of which family Pietro Belli, mandatario of the Holy Office, is the manager; with Belli's reply and other papers relating thereto.

f. 259. Rimino, 1787. Papers relating to Francesco Pedrizzi, Bargello of the Holy Office; imprisonment for debt.

f. 275. Venice and Verona, 1731. Circa la pensione che se paga dalla mensa Vescovile di Verona al S. Off. di Venezia.

Vol. 31. Rimino, Faenza, etc., 1785–1790, and 1697.

f. 1. Rimino and Ravenna, 1789. Memorial from the people and Councillors of Longiano, complaining that Pietro Belli, relying on his character as mandatory of the Holy Office, not only refuses to pay the immense debts he has incurred, but has appropriated public funds, including those of the Monte di Pietà; with his reply, and other papers thereto relating.

f. 47. Faenza, 1788. In the matter of the attempted arrest of Filippo Ricci, Cancelliere del S. O. di Predappia (for supposed contraband sale of cattle), contrary to the privilege of officers of the Inquisition. He had taken refuge with the Capuchins of Forli.

The papers relating to these two cases are mixed in the binding (as frequently happens).

f. 133. Rimini and S. Leo, 1787. Papers relating to the (opposed) appointment of P. Dom. Ant. Merli, as Vicar of the Holy Office in S. Leo, and the removal of P. Franc. Ant. Ottaviani.

I.—The Annals of Innisfallen, A.D. 320–1320. Written in the year 1765 by John O'Conry (or O'Mulconry), ff. 65.

Inserted is a letter from Dr. John O'Donovan in which he says, 'It appears from a letter (prefixed to the copy in the Royal Irish Academy) in the handwriting of Theophilus O'Flanagan, [who states that Dr. O'Brien made the Bodleian copy of the Annals the basis of his compilation] that the Dublin copy . . . was manufactured by the Rt. Rev. John O'Brien, sometime R. C. Bishop of Cloyne.' If published, he says, it ought to be entitled, 'Annals of Ireland, compiled in France from various authorities, Irish and English, in the year 1765, by Mr. John Conry and Dr. John O'Brien.'

II.—f. 84. Catalogue of the Kings and Battles of the Dal-Cas, from Mogh Nuadhat to Brian Boru . . . drawn from the old Book of Munster in the possession of Donnell O'Sullivan. Interspersed are quotations and entire poems of ancient bards, including—

XIII.—f. 144. Poem on the kings of Cashel by O'Dugan.

XIV.—f. 146. Metrical genealogies of the Irish saints, composed according to Dr. Chas. O'Conor by Selvac of Cashel, s. xii. (see Bibl. Stowensis, p. 150). There is a copy in the Bodleian. These are followed by prose pedigrees.

XV.—f. 152. 'Contention of the Bards,' written in the reign of James I., concerning the comparative dignity of the nobility of the North and the South; see O'Reilly's 'Irish Writers,' under the name Teige Mac Dary, pp. 149, etc.

f. 174*b* are two poems of Torna Eigeas (both published in Hardiman's Irish Minstrelsy); and a poem by Owen Magrath lamenting the downfall of the Irish.

f. 175. Poem by Fergal Ward (Mac an Bhaird) on the same subject.

f. 175*b*. Poem by David O'Bruadair on the same.

Annales Ultonienses, A.D. 431–1504, in the handwriting of Rory O'Luinin (see f. 104*b* 2).

These Annals were compiled by Cathal Mac Manus, who d. 1498, and continued to 1541 by Roderick Cassidy, Archdeacon of Clogher. See O'Conor's Bibliotheca MS. Stowensis, vol. i., p. 174. The present copy ends imperfect at the year 1504. There are also wanting the leaves containing the years 1102–1108, 1113–1162, and 1344–1346. The first folio is numbered 12.

ff. 12–15 contain a fragment of the Annals of Tighernach. f. 15*b* commences a poem on the Maguires, under whose patronage the volume was written.

The original writing has faded, but the greater part of the book has been gone over with black ink and the letters carefully restored.

1283 fol. membr., s. xvii.

A Medical Treatise (imperfect), ff. 38 (lettered on the back 'Guido de Chauliac').

Treating of boils, scrofula, cancer, wounds by arrows, fistula, injuries of the nerves, etc. The author seems to have followed Avicenna in his classification of diseases, but quotes the opinions of many other physicians.

Tales, Poems, etc., ff. 182, written in 1742 by Hugh O'Daly.

fol. 1. A romantic tale entitled, Saċtra Ċonnaill Ġulbain, 'The Adventures of Connell Gulban' (son of Niall of the Nine Hostages, and ancestor of the O'Donnells), 90 pp. O'Donovan thinks the tale was composed in the fifteenth century. The style he says is verbose, and the narrative childishly marvellous.

f. 46. 'The Adventures of Richard and Lisarde.' This appears to be a translation from the Spanish.

f. 76. 'Adventures in the Enchanted Palace.' The scene is in Greece.

f. 98. Another Spanish tale entitled, 'Adventures of the Compassionate Wood Kern (i.e. Bandit).'

f. 120. Poem on the genealogy of the saints of Ireland, here ascribed to Eochy Eiges O'Clercan, surnamed Eochy of the battle of Creeve-Tullagh (for another copy see No. 1281).

f. 140. Short Annals of Tirconnell from 1540 to 1646, then beginning with 1241 and going on to 1626. A part is translated into English in the handwriting of Dr. Fras. Sullivan.

f. 141. Genealogy of the descendants of Milesius.

f. 142. A poem in which the meanings of some old Irish words are explained.

f. 144. The same words explained in prose.

f. 147. Account of the Colonies that settled in Ireland, from the time of the antediluvian Cesair to that of the sons of Milesius. 147*b* contains a list of Archbishoprics and Bishoprics in Ireland.

f. 148. Poem on the tutelary saints of various tribes in Ireland.

f. 148*b*. Poem beginning: Na ṙíṙ ꝑıoṙ ꝺo ṗaoᵹaıl ṗuaıll.

f. 149. Poem by S. Columcille, beginning: maonaṙáṅ ꝺaṁ ıṙ an ṫrıaꝺ (published by the Irish Archæological Society, Miscellany, vol. i. See also Yellow Book of Lecan).

f. 149*b*. Poem beginning: A Ḋe ꝺıl ꝯaꝺaıṙ ꝺaṁṙa.

f. 150. Poem on the virtues of the saints of Ireland (by Cuimin of Condere).

f. 151, line 18. Historical poem, in the form of a dialogue, between St. Patrick and an ancient Thorn that grew on the hill of Emania.

f. 152, line 18. Poem on the Contention of the Four Elements.

f. 153. Elegy of Conn of the Hundred Battles, beg. lomꝺa anoċt a huıle a ɵıṙe.

f. 153*b*. Historical poem by Duncuach (whose date is unknown), beg. Reſꝺıᵹ ꝺam, a Ḋe, ꝺo neım. It begins from Adam, who is said to have had 50 sons and 50 daughters. The names of the wives of Shem, Ham, and Japhet are given as Olla, Oliva, and Ollivana.

f. 157. A prophetic poem, 'fathered on' Columcille, beg. ɵıṙꝺ a Ḋaoıċın ꝺuaın (of events from his own time to the coming of the English).

f. 159, 19; 160, 10; 161*a*, s. f.; 161*b*; 165*a*, 7. Other similar poems also in the name of Columcille.

f. 162. Poem representing Columcille as contending with two demons.

f. 163. Poem in which Oisin relates to St. Patrick a prophecy of his father Fin MacCumail.

f. 164. Poem in which Fin MacCumail foretells the arrival of St. Patrick, etc.

f. 165. A prophetic poem fathered on Coireall, son of Crunan.

f. 166. Another ascribed to St. Ultan, in which the saint laments the state to which Ireland would be reduced by the Saxons.

f. 167, 10. A prophetic poem ascribed to St. Berchan (relating to Red Hugh O'Donnell, who died in Spain, A.D. 1603; see No. 1456, f. 133*b*).

f. 167*b*. Another fathered on St. Maol-tamhlachta.

f. 168. Poems by Columcille on hospitality and on his treatment of the poor.

f. 168 s. f. Account of the number and discipline of the soldiers of Fin Mac Cooil.

f. 170. A historical tale entitled, 'Death of Dermot, son of Fergus Cairbheoil.'

Inverting the volume we find a genealogical tree of the descendants of Aongus, or Oilioll Olum, King of Munster, d. A.D. 260.

ff. 4–7. English colloquial phrases with their Irish equivalents, the latter in the hand of Hugh O'Daly.

Miscellanea, ff. 180. In the handwriting of Hugh O'Daly.

f. 1. De Caritate; De Paciencia, etc. ('probably originally written or translated by one of the Franciscans of Louvain').

f. 79. A religious poem by Maurice O'Hosey, beg. Torach ar mbeaċa bár Dé.

f. 81. The Life of St. Brigid.

f. 95*b*, 8. Life of St. Patrick.

f. 104*b*. A controversial poem by Gillabride O'Hosey, addressed to a Franciscan who had embraced the reformed religion, beginning: Truaġ liom a ċompain do ċor. There is another copy of this in a later No., where the author is called Bonaventure O'Hosey, and it is said to have been addressed to Miler Magrath, Abp. of Cashel.

f. 107. A romantic tale, entitled Mearuġaḋ cleireaḋ Coluim-cille, 'Wandering of the clergy of Columcille.'

f. 111. Account of the miracles of St. Finian. 'The language and orthography are ancient.'

f. 114, 13. Account of a dissension between St. Patrick and Leagaire, monarch of Ireland.

f. 115. A poem, in which Oisin, son of Fin Mac Cooil, is represented repeating to St. Patrick a prophecy of Fin's, beginning, A Oiſin an raiḋ riñ. (See another copy in the preceding No., f. 163.)

f. 116. Poem enumerating rivers and seas known to the ancients.

f. 117. Anecdotes from the life of St. Patrick, prose and verse.

f. 119. Short notice of the regulation of Calends and Cycles.

f. 119, 9. Description of the characteristics of the different tribes in Ireland.

f. 120. Poem treating of the different Colonies that settled in Ireland, followed by a list of the descendants of Maurice Fitzgerald and Annals of the family.

f. 123. Will of Cormac Mac Cuilionain, Bishop and King of Munster in the 10th century, in verse. Stated to have been composed the day before his fall in the battle of Moy-ailve, in which he fought against Failve Flann, king of Ireland, A.D. 908.

f. 124. A prophetical poem 'fathered on' St. Fursey, describing the wickedness of future ages.

f. 124. Prophetical poem (anon.) on the same subject. O'Donovan states that some of the prophecies in this and the preceding No. were translated by Dennis Taaffe, and published in his life of Columcille. Taaffe's book is not in this Library, nor does it appear in the British Museum Catalogue. Some of the prophecies were also published by O'Kearney in 1856. O'Donovan gives a curious account of the popular belief as to St. Columcille's book of prophecy supposed to be preserved at Armagh and Derry, but concealed from public inspection. That at Derry was in a chest which 'no man born of woman' was entitled to open. Hervey, Earl of Bristol and Bishop of Derry, not being 'born of woman,' was said to have opened it and found the MS.

f. 125*b*. The rule of St. Machutu of Rathen, afterwards called Carthach of Lismore. The language is old and difficult.

f. 128, 6. A religious poem, beginning: Aṁṙe ṁan inṁain.

f. 128*b*, 19. Poem in which the soul of Donnell, king of Meath, laments his having plundered the church of St. Kieran, for which he was then suffering the pains of hell.

f. 130. Litany of St. Aengus. It mentions Egyptian and other foreign saints interred in Ireland. Translated by Hugh Ward (Varæus) in his life of St. Rumold.

f. 132. A prophetic account of the state of society towards the end of the world, claiming to be by Mac Lonain (who, according to the tract in this vol., f. 148, died A.D. 896).

f. 133*b*. Tale about Bran, king of Leinster.

f. 135. Poem on the history of the bell called clog-na-riogh, or Bell of the Kings, still preserved at Fenagh, Co. Leitrim. It is said to have belonged to St. Caillin, and to have contained the water in which 19 of the Irish kings were baptized. It was rung by the monks of Fenagh to curse several chiefs who refused to pay them their dues.

f. 136. A hortatory poem, beginning, Cinᵭuṛ aᵭᵭa ᵭo ċiñṛaṁ.

f. 137. Verses on the Trinity, and a poem on the ages of Christ and his disciples.

f. 137*b*, 24. Poem enumerating the seven ecclesiastical degrees, and showing how Christ performed the duties of each.

f. 139. A prophetic poem, A-Ḋe ṁaíṛ coᵹaᵭa muᵭa.

f. 140. Poem on the Fast of Friday by Maoliosa.

f. 140. Of the different kinds of timber of which the Cross of Christ was made (viz. cedar, cypress, palm, and olive).

f. 141. Short extracts, including a few curious proverbs.

f. 141*b*. Verses on chronology from the creation to the birth of Christ.

f. 142. Poem on the Irish numerical letters, followed by another on the fates of children according to the day of the week on which they were born.

f. 142*b*. Two short prophetic poems ascribed to St. Bec Mac De (6th century). The first begins: Colcc biᵭ aṛ uṛᵭa; the second: Cı biaᵭ cṛaᵭaiᵭ a ceallaiᵭ.

f. 167. Historical poem relating to King Conraoi beginning: Coımeᴄaр lıр cenð an рıǧ.

f. 168. Pedigrees of Irish saints.

f. 179*b*. Poem on the same subject (see No. 1281, f. 146).

f. 184. Story of a monk.

f. 185. Poem in the form of a dialogue between St. Patrick and Oisin.

f. 186. Poem on the four men who were permitted to survive the deluge in the four quarters of the globe.

1. Leabhar Gabhala or Book of Invasions (compiled in 1631 in the Franciscan Convent of Lisgoole, Co. Fermanagh).

The dedication, to Brian Maguire, first Baron of Enniskillen, begins thus: 'I, the friar Michael O'Clery have, by permission of my superiors, undertaken to purge of error, rectify, and transcribe this old chronicle called Leabhar Gabhala. . . . This I could not accomplish without the assistance of other chronicles at some fixed abode.'

In the Bibliotheca MS. Stowensis, vol. i., p. 2, Dr. O'Conor describes a 12th-century vellum MS. of the original Leabhar Gabhaltas, which formed the basis of this work, and, on p. 143, he remarks that O'Cleri's book differs very little from this ancient copy.

The work has been translated into French by Henri Lizeray and William O'Dwyer. Paris, 1884. Some portions have been translated into English, viz. the Preface, by O'Curry in his Lectures on the MS. Materials of Irish History; the Poems on Teamhair (Tara) by Petrie, Trans. R. I. A., vol. xviii.

Sundry metrical compositions are embodied in the work, viz.:—

p. 13. The Adventures of Ceasair, Ceaċraċa cra don cuip cin̄.

p. 19. Adventures of Partholan, Parċolon canar cáinic.

p. 25. Poem of 104 verses by Eochy O'Flynn (d. 984). Begins: A ċaoṁa ċláir Cuinn ċaoiṁpinḡ.

p. 35. Poem of 196 verses by the same: Eip oll oirdnid Ḡaoiḋil.

Tales and Poems. Transcribed by Hugh O'Daly in the year 1750.

f. 1. Pedigree of O'Malone.

f. 3. The tale entitled Táin Bo Cuailgne. 'Unquestionably transcribed from a very ancient MS.' 'The oldest copy of this tale hitherto discovered is in Leabhar na hUidhri.' See O'Conor in Bibliotheca MS. Stowensis, vol. i., p. 156; but O'Conor's translation of the Irish account of the author, etc., of this tale is incorrect. Fergus Mac Roigh, the hero of the tale, is pretended to have been resuscitated by St. Caillin for the purpose of giving his account of the war.

f. 26. A historical tale of the time of Eochy Airev. 'The cast of the phraseology shows this tale to be of considerable antiquity.'

f. 54. The poem called Amhra Cholaim Chille, or Eulogium of Columcille, written by Eochoidh, surnamed Dallan Forgaill (fl. 580), 'written in a very obscure dialect of the ancient Irish,' and accompanied by a gloss in more modern language.

f. 81 begins the Book of the O'Byrnes of Glenmalur, consisting of poems in praise of Hugh Mac Shane O'Byrne (who d. 1579), 'the warlike opponent and plunderer of his English and Irish neighbours'; see 'Four Masters,' an. 1579.

f. 81. Poem of 12 verses by Donogh O'Muirgios (about 1570[1]).

f. 81, l. 25. Poem by Gilla-na-naev (Roe) M'Keogh (or Mac Eochy).

f. 81*b*. By the same.

f. 81*b*, l. 12. By John, son of Fergal M'Keogh.

f. 82*b*. By Mac Cassarly.

f. 83*b*. By Teige Dall O'Higgin.

f. 83*b*, l. 25. By Gilla-na-naev M'Keogh.

f. 84. By Shane, son of Rory O'Higgin.

f. 84*b*. By Fergal, son of Thomas M'Keogh.

[1] These dates ('about') are taken from Dr. Sullivan's marginal notes. O'Donovan, by a curious mistake, has read in every instance 'obiit.'

f. 85*b*, 19. By Doighre O'Daly.

f. 86*a*. s. f. By Gilla-na-naev M'Keogh.

f. 87. By Donogh O'Morissy, beginning: Beach eólaiṙ na héiġṙi Dhoḋ (about 1570).

f. 90. By Ferganainm Mac Keogh.

f. 91. By the same, entitled Caithreim, or Catalogue of the battles of Hugh O'Byrne. This document gives the original Irish spelling of the names of many places in Wicklow, Dublin, Kildare, etc.

f. 94 begins a series of poems on Fiach O'Byrne, son of Hugh (d. 1597).

f. 94. Four poems by Niall O'Rooney (about 1590).

f. 97. Poem by Fergus oge Mac an Bhaird (Ward) in praise of Fiach and Leinster.

f. 98. By Aitios O'Lorcain.

f. 99*b* and 100*b*, and 106*b*. By Fergal, son of Looee Mac Keogh.

f. 102. By the same, in praise of Hugh O'Byrne and his sons and brothers.

f. 102*a*, l. 12. By Rory, son of Hugh Magrath.

f. 103. By the same.

f. 103, l. 27. By Shane, son of Philip M'Keogh.

f. 104*b* and f. 106. By Gilla-na-naev M'Keogh.

f. 105. By Donnell O'Higgin.

f. 107. A warlike ode by Aongus Mac Doighri O'Daly, addressed to the Irish in general, and to the O'Byrnes in particular, to rouse them against the English, beginning: Dia lib a laoċṙuiḋ Gaoiḋiol. Published in Hardiman's 'Irish Minstrelsy,' ii., 280.

f. 107*b*, 22. Poem of 12 lines by Donogh O'Phelan (O'Filain).

f. 107*b*, 29. Poem of 28 lines by Randal M'Keogh.

f. 108. Poem of 20 lines by Melaghlin O'Coffey lamenting the destitute state of the house of Fiach after his expulsion, beginning: Ní ḟaicim oiġiṙ Dhoḋa.

Ibid. By Tuileagna Roe O'Mulconry.

f. 108*b*. Poem by Giolla-na-naev M'Keogh, attempting to reconcile the O'Byrnes and O'Tooles, beginning: Dia do ṙeiċiach aṙ Ġeaṙaċ.

Ibid. Song by Aongus Mac Doighri O'Daly on the success of one of Fiach's expeditions, beginning: Sġeil ṫaṙġṁaṙ do ṙáimiġ ḟa ċṙíoċaiḃ ḟáil.

f. 109. By Donnell M'Keogh lamenting the death of Fiach. (Fiach was slain in 1597 'in a treacherous attack made on him by his kinsman at the request of the lord justice of Ireland, Sir William Russell.' The 'Four Masters.'

f. 109*b*. By Aongus O'Daly on the same subject.

f. 111. By Fergal Mac Looee on the same.

f. 111*b*. By Fergal Oge M'Keogh on the same.

f. 112, l. 11 begins the collection of poems composed for Felim, son of Fiach O'Byrne. The first is by Eochy O'Hosey.

f. 113. By Aongus O'Daly.

Ibid. By Giolla-iosa O'Daly on the history of Leinster, and in praise of the sons of Fiach.

f. 114*b*. By Mahon O'Higgin on the cessation of the war in Leinster and in praise of Felim.

f. 115*b*. By Cuconnaught O'Daly on the same.

f. 116*b*. By Donnell M'Keogh, welcoming Felim on his return from Ulster with auxiliaries 'to disturb the glory of the English.'

f. 117. By Eochy O'Hosey, who endeavours to regain the lost confidence of Felim.

f. 117*b*. By Donnell M'Keogh on occasion of the illness of Felim.

f. 118. By John O'Rooney.

Ibid. By Donogh —— on O'Byrne's fortress of Ballynacor.

f. 119. By Fergal Mac Looee.

f. 121. By Donnell Carragh M'Keogh.

f. 123. By Eochy O'Hosey.

ff. 126, 127. Two poems by the same in praise of Rose, daughter of Fiach O'Toole.

f. 129. By Thomas M'Keogh in praise of Torlogh, son of Fiach O'Byrne.

Ibid. By Aengus O'Daly on the same.

f. 130*b*. By Donnell, son of Ferganainm M'Keogh, to the same Torlogh.

f. 131. By Aongus O'Daly on Felim O'Byrne.

f. 131*b*. By Donogh M'Keogh on the deaths of John O'Byrne and his sister Margaret, son and daughter of Fiach.

f. 132*b*. By Aongus O'Daly on Cathair, brother of Fiach.

f. 133. By Donnell M'Keogh on Edmond and Gerald O'Byrne.

f. 134. By Donogh, son of Donnell M'Keogh, an attempt to reconcile the sons of Fiach O'Byrne and the sons of John, son of Redmond O'Byrne.

f. 134*b*. By Niall O'Rooney on the son of John O'Byrne.

f. 135. By Donnell O'Lorcan in praise of Girald O'Byrne.

f. 136. Begins the collection of poems composed for Brian, son of Fiach O'Byrne, consisting of only two poems; the first by Rory, son of Thomas M'Keogh.

f. 137. By Donnell, son of Ferganainm M'Keogh.

f. 138. Pedigree of John, son of Hugh O'Byrne.

f 138*b*. Pedigree of the tribe of Ballynakill, i.e. of James, son of Cahir, who was lord of Ballynakill.

f. 139. Pedigree of the old tribe of Doon, and of other branches of the family of Ballynacorr More.

f. 140. Poem of 240 lines by Duffy O'Duigennan on the O'Neills, princes of Tirone, from Niall Oge, who commenced his reign in 1390, to Hugh, Earl of Tyrone, who fled to Spain in 1608.

f. 142. Poem by Eochy O'Hosey, written for Torlogh Luineach O'Neill (i.e. Hugh, last Earl of Tyrone), calling on him to summon the forces of Ireland against the English.

f. 145. O'Dugan's Topographical Poem. Published with the next by Dr. O'Donovan for the Irish Archæol. Society, 1862.

f. 151*b*. O'Huidhrin's Topographical Poem, written as a supplement to the preceding (see No. 1286, p. 165). It is here falsely ascribed to Donogh M'Keogh.

f. 157. Poem by Dermot Mac Ward (about 1689) addressed to some Cormac in defence of the Irian race, the ancient inhabitants of Ulster.

f. 159. Poem by Teige Dall O'Higgin (about 1585) on the history and nobleness of the men of Oriel. Written for Cuconnaught Maguire, chief of Fermanagh.

f. 161. Poem by John, son of Rory Oge O'Higgin (d. 1585), in praise of the same Cuconnaught Maguire.

f. 162. Poem by Edmond O'Cassidy (about 1710) in praise of Brian, son of Cuconnaught Maguire.

164*b*. By the same on the return of Brian to Ireland. 'The O'Cassidys were hereditary physicians of the Maguires.'

Ibid. Poem by O'Hosey in defence of himself to some 'Son of Teige.'

f. 166. By Owen Mac Ward on the deaths of the Earls O'Neill and O'Donnell (about 1653).

f. 167. By Hugh, son of John O'Daly (about 1728), enumerating the most distinguished Irish chiefs who fell in the battle of Aughrim.

f. 167*b*. Poem by Owen O'Daly (about 1689) on the superiority of the O'Neills to the O'Mores.

f. 168. By O'Dugan, giving the history of the descendants of Cathaoir More, who was king of Leinster in the second century.

f. 171. Elegy of Sorley Boy Mac Donnell, who fell at Aughrim.

f. 174*b*. A satiric poem by Hugh O'Daly (about 1726), written against O'Luinin, an Irish bard who went to Dublin and changed his religion.

1289 fol. chart., 1745.

'The Psalter of Tara, transcribed by Teige O'Naghtan, which contains the Book of Invasions, the Book of the Eoganachts . . . .'

The title 'Psalter of Tara' is, as O'Donovan observes, a fictitious one, as writers are mentioned who flourished 600 years after the desertion of Tara.

The first 12 pp. not numbered contain a very minute table of the contents.

p. 1–21 contain a prose account of the six ages of the world taken from Holy Scripture and the Fathers.

p. 13, l. 32, begins a poem by Donnchuach O'Huathghaile (see another copy, No. 1284, f. 153*b*).

p. 21, l. 24. A prose account of the contents of Flann's poem on synchronisms of Irish kings, with those of Assyria, Persia, etc. Flann of the monastery of Bute, Professor of Divinity, died A.D. 1056.

p. 27. A metrical enumeration of the principal eras.

p. 28, l. 6. A table of the measures used by the ancient Irish.

p. 28. Poem of 248 lines by Malmura Othva, beginning: Canam bunaḋar na nGaeḋil. Published in the Irish version of Nennius by the Irish Archæol. Soc., p. 220.

p. 29. The Leabhar Gabhala or Book of Invasions. A more ancient form, and more copious than that which was revised by Michael O'Clery (No. 1286), but agreeing word for word with the copy in the Book of Ballymote.

p. 106. Catalogue of kings of Ireland to Roderic O'Conor.

p. 125, s. f. List of kings of Ulster who dwelt in Emania with a poem on the same.

p. 131. List of the kings of Leinster from Breasal Bealach to Dermot Mac Morogh, with (p. 134) a poem on the same.

p. 137. List of the kings of Connaught from Amhalgy to Roderic O'Conor, with a poem on the same (p. 139).

p. 143. List of the kings of Munster from Eogan Taidhleach to Donnell O'Brien, with (p. 145) a poem by Shane O'Dugan on the same (see No. 1284, f. 120).

p. 149. A tract on Irish Jurisprudence, entitled, 'Teagasg riogh,' i.e. 'the instruction of kings,' said to have been written by king Cormac, A.D. 213. A translation of some extracts from this is given in the 'Dublin Penny Journal,' vol. i. O'Donovan quotes from a MS. copy of Keating's History of Ireland, a statement to the effect that, when the title of chief, king, etc., was conferred on any one, the Chronicler or Recorder was present with this book, and sometimes security was demanded for the fulfilment of the duties of the position according to the laws given therein. Very few copies of Keating contain the passage.

p. 175. A short poem headed 'The desires of Cormac,' followed by a prose account of the same monarch and of Fin Mac Cooil, the leader of his kerns.

p. 178. Poem giving a sketch of the history of the houses at Tara, followed by two modern poems, one headed 'Caoilte lamenting the state of Oisin,' the other 'The advice of Finn to Looee.'

p. 179. Leabhar Eoganach, or Book of Genealogies, etc., of the descendants of Eogan, son of Niall of the Nine Hostages. All this seems to have been copied from the Book of Ballymote.

p. 220. Leabhar Connachtach, or Book of Connaught, containing the pedigrees of the families sprung from Brian, brother of the aforesaid Niall.

p. 246. Leabhar Fiachrach, containing pedigrees of the families descended from Fiachra, brother of Niall. There is a better copy in the Book of Lecan.

p. 251. Leabhar Oirghialach, or Book of Oriel, containing the pedigrees of the families descended from the three Collas who conquered Ulster, A.D. 333.

p. 271. Leabhar Laighneach, or Book of Leinster, containing the pedigrees of the families of Leinster.

p. 301. The Book of Muskerry, containing the pedigrees of the families sprung from Cairbre Muse, who flourished in the third century.

p. 313. Seanchus b-fear nAlban, or genealogical history of the men of Scotland.

p. 319. Leabhar Ultach, or Book of Ulster, containing the genealogies of the ancient inhabitants of Ulster, commonly called the Irian race and the Clann Rury.

p. 351. Leabhar Muimhneach or Book of Munster; see Book of Ballymote.

p. 397. Leabhar Sleachta Dairfhine or Book of the posterity of Dairfine.

p. 409. The Topographical work called Dinnseanchus or history of hills, fortresses, etc. A better copy on vellum is noted post.

p. 506. Auraicept na n-Eigeas, 'Primer of the Bards.'

p. 551. Grammar of Ferkertne the poet.

p. 571. Of the degrees of the poets.

p. 588. Of the degrees of the church.

p. 594. Of the degrees of the champions.

p. 596. Book of the Ollaves or chief poets, containing various rules for poetic composition. The foregoing part of the MS. seems to have been copied from the Book of Ballymote.

p. 616. Poem ascribed to Oisin, in which he describes for St. Patrick the battle of Gabhra, fought about the close of the 3rd century. 'The site of this battle is still shown in Meath, a short distance north of the hill of Tara, where a stream still retains the name of Gabhra (Goura).'

p. 621. A metrical treatise on the nature of letters and versification, called Leabhar Aiste Danaireacht.

p. 625. A metrical treatise on Latin Prosody.

p. 653. A prose dialogue entitled Comhluadar Fhinn agus Ailbhe, a curious specimen of old Irish proverbial sayings.

p. 654. Poem enumerating the territories and townlands in Ireland.

p. 659. A treatise on poetry, partly metrical, entitled Leabhar Filidheachta.

p. 668. Poem on the history of the Picts. See Appendix to Pinkerton's History of Scotland for an account of this poem.

p. 675. War between Con and Mogha.

p. 735. The Battle of Clontarf, A.D. 1014.

p. 741. Poem lamenting the death of Brian Boru who fell at Clontarf, beginning: Ꭰnoıp ꞇaınıc ꞇuıꞇım ḃṙıaın.

p. 744. Poem in the form of a dialogue between Mac Coisi, chief bard of the North, and Mac Liag, chief poet and secretary to Brian Boru, beginning: maṙ ḋuın ḃuıꞇ a ıaṙla (recte ıṙaṙḃ) ḟeıl.

p. 751. Account of the dispute between king Dermot (A.D. 563) and St. Rodanus, in consequence of which the latter cursed the hill of Tara, and prayed that no king might thenceforward dwell in it.

p. 755. Leabhar Ceart na n-Eigeas, 'the proper book of the poets,' a treatise on grammar and poetry.

p. 848 Pedigree of O'Reilly, chief of East Breifny.

p. 859. Pedigree of the family of Mac Brady, stated to have been translated from the Latin of Boethius Roe Mac Egan, a Franciscan, and of John Hackett, a Dominican, who wrote at Louvain.

p. 862. Poem by Brian Roe Mac Conmee in praise of Ulster, beginning: Iomḋa uıṙṙım aꝝ Ullꞇaıḃ.

p. 864. Poem on the history of the palace of Emania, beginning: Ꮯaṁaın alaıń ár̀uṙ Ullꞇaıḃ.

p. 865. Poem giving the pedigree of the Hy-Manians or O'Kellys of Connaught.

p. 872. Poem by Erard Mac Coisi, chief poet to king Maelseaghlin, lamenting the deserted state of the palace of Dun-na-sgiath, after Maelseaghlin's death in 1020. Begins: Ḃuṗṗan maṗ ṫaí a Ḋúin na ṗʒéiċ.

p. 873. Leabhar Gabhala, as given in the Book of Lecan. This is much briefer than the copy compiled by O'Clery.

p. 916. Leabhar Tairghiallach, or Book of Prophecies. All the poems in this have been already noticed in No. 1285.

p. 947. The Triads; a collection of Irish proverbs and wise sayings. It begins with an enumeration of places in Ireland proverbially noted for some peculiarity.

p. 958. Prophetic poem ascribed to St. Columcille (see No. 1284, f. 157.

p. 960. Poem by Coircall Mac Curnain describing the wretched state of Ireland in his time.

p. 961. Poem predicting the coming of the English, beginning: Ḃaiṗ liom a ṗaoi ṗeanḋa.

1290 fol. chart., c. 1740.

Irish-English Dictionary by Teige O'Naghtan.

At the end is a list of Irish and English names of plants and trees. 'It contains a vast number of words, and is very valuable as being the production of a very able Irish scholar, who was born in 1671, and lived during a period in which the ancient Irish language was perfectly understood; but it is very defective as a Dictionary, inasmuch as it very seldom gives any examples to elucidate the English interpretations of the various ancient words. Notwithstanding this defect it is a work of great authority, and the meanings given of Irish words may be relied upon as far as they go. O'Reilly copied the greater part of this work into his Dictionary, but he does not tell us what words he took from it.'

Poems and Miscellanea.

Transcribed by Hugh O'Daly for Dr. Sullivan in 1755.

f. 1. A romantic tale entitled Bruighean da Choga, describing a war between Connaught and Ulster about A.D. 1.

f. 16*b*. Life of St. Laurence the martyr.

f. 26. Account of the 15 signs preceding the day of judgment. This seems to have been translated from the Latin.

f. 31. Life of St. James.

f. 35. Life of St. Mary of Egypt, seems to be a translation from the Latin. The language is ancient.

f. 44. Account of the creation of the world, etc.

f. 55. Fragment of a poem on Irish chronology.

f. 56*b*. Poem on Irish history and genealogy, beginning: Aoiḃinn ṗin a Éire áṙḋ.

f. 83. Poem by Conaing Boy O'Mulconry on the tombs of Clonmacnoise and the kings interred in them, beginning: A ṙeileaġ laoch leiṫe Chuinn.

f. 84*b*. Poem of 160 lines by Maurice O'Mulconry on the merits of Hugh O'Conor and the history of his family, beginning: Ni ṁaiṙionn ḃ' Éiṙinn acṫ Aoḋ.

f. 87. Poem of 132 lines by Teige Mac Dary on the genealogy of the descendants of Con of the hundred battles.

f. 89*b*. Poem of 188 lines by Cormac, son of Carroll Mac Coinmidhe, on the downfall of the O'Neills, and on the death of Art O'Neill, beginning: Ḟaḃa an ṗuaiġ ṙi ar ṙíoġṗuiḋe ḃreaġ. The family of Mac Conmee (now Anglicised Mac Namee) were hereditary bards to the O'Neills. In this poem the bard laments that the blessing left by St. Patrick to the family of O'Neill has become null and void on account of the anger of God with them.

f. 93. Poem of 104 lines by Ferflatha O'Gnimh (now Agnew) on the death of the same Art O'Neill, beginning: buaiḋreaḋ cóiġiḋ cáoi énṁná.

f. 96*b*. Poem of 172 lines addressed by the same Ferflatha to Torlogh O'Neill on the state of Ireland.

f. 97*b*. Anonymous poem of 28 lines on the Royal palaces of Ireland, beginning: Sé ṗıġ ṗuıṗc 'Ꮎıṗıonn anallάın. Ascribed by some to O'Dugan, who d. 1372.

f. 98. Poem of 216 lines addressed to Magennis (the son of Hugh) by Fergal Oge Mac Ward, beginning: Ꭲṗí uaıċne ım ınıṗ Ꮓaoıḋeal.

This gives a sketch of the early Milesian history of Ireland, and of the families descended from the three sons of Milesius.

f. 162. Extracts from poems on different subjects.

f. 162*b*. A Fingalian poem, partly in the form of a dialogue between St. Patrick and Oisin, beginning: Lá ḋúinne air Śliaḃ Fuaiḋ.

f. 163*b*. Elegy by Andrew Maguire on the death of Conor Maguire, the last baron of Enniskillen (executed at Whitehall, 1641). Beginning, Tréiġ ḋo ġruaim an uair fi aSháṙa.

f. 165*b*. Poem in praise of a lady; beginning: Lá ḋa raḃur a ġeaḋair na Ġailḃe.

f. 167. Short moral poem, beginning: Mairċ ḋo ní compáḋ ġan claċt.

f. 167*b*. Poem by Thomas Mac Clery, giving directions to avoid the gout.

f. 168. Table of contents and a few lines addressed by the writer, who calls himself O'Daly Fionn, to Dr. Sullivan.

1292 4to maj. chart., ff. 221.

Annales et Miscellanea.

(Inserted in the vol. is a description of its contents by Dr. Chas. O'Conor).

f. 3 contains a short table of contents (in Latin) ending thus: 'Hæc omnia monumenta zelo ac industria illustrissimi ac reverendissimi Joannis O'Brien, Episcopi Cloynensis et Rossensis in Hibernia qui die xiii[a] mensis Martii, anno 1769, Lugduni in Gallia obiit, comparata et in unum hunc codicem digesta fuerant.'

f. 4 (anciently numbered 487) contains the 16 concluding lines of a poem in praise of some member of the family of the Geraldines. There follow 16 lines headed, in English, 'the ensuing lines were composed in answer to a fals message.'

f. 4*b*. A tract entitled, Bloġ do ṡeanċuṙ ṗil Ui-Briain, i.e. a fragment of the history of the descendants of Brian (Boru). (See another copy, No. 1281, f. 106.)

f. 13*b*. Part of the history of the Burkes as taken from the book of the O'Mulconrys called Iris (ends imperfect).

f. 15. Caiṫṙéim Ṫoirḋealḃaiġ, i.e. the victories of Torlogh (O'Brien), being an account of the wars of the O'Briens, both amongst themselves, and against the English from the time of the English conquest to 1318, originally written by John Magrath, principal historian of the nobles of Dal Cais in the year 1459. Transcribed by Andrew Mac Curtin. There is a translation of this work (by Peter Connell) in the British Museum, and a copy of this is in the library of the Royal Irish Academy, where there is also a copy of the original Irish. O'Donovan states that the original vellum MS. was in the possession of Sir W. Betham.

f. 113. (formerly numbered as p. 40) An imperfect copy of the Annals of Tigernach. Transcribed, as Dr. O'Conor shows, from the Bodleian MS. Laud., 488. On f. 139*b*, s. f. marg. is written, 'Tigernacus huc usque scripsit, et hoc anno quievit,' viz. an. 1088.

f. 164 (formerly numbered p. 234) begins the 'Chronicon Scotorum,' by Duald Mac Firbis (d. 1670), ending A.D. 1135. Autograph of Duald Mac Firbis. See O'Curry, 'MS. Materials,' p. 128.

The copy in the Stowe Library was transcribed from this (Bibl. MS. Stowensis i., p. 201).

The last 4 pp. of the volume contain Annals from 1142 to 1150, which O'Donovan says may be part of the 'Chronicon Scotorum.'

The Annals of Kilronan, or of Loch Cé (Logh Kea), A.D. 1014 to 1571.

There are 99 leaves of vellum and 36 of paper, many of the latter blank. This book was formerly lettered on the back, 'Tigernachi continuatio'; but O'Donovan claims to have shown that it is the Book of the O'Duigenans of Kilronan. O'Curry identifies it with the Annals of Loch Cé (MS. Materials of Irish History, p. 94 sqq.). The chief transcriber was Philip Bradley, and the date of his transcription 1588. There is a memorandum by David Duigenan that the book contained three leaves and five score of vellum. It has therefore lost four vellum leaves since this was written.

The defects in the vellum are from the year 1138 to 1170. Here six leaves of paper are inserted, but they are blank. Again there is a defect from 1316 to 1462. Here 22 paper leaves are inserted; the first six of which are blank. The entries on the remaining leaves are very scanty, and are repeated twice. After 1462 the writing is in different hands. There are also 4 paper leaves inserted after the first folio, on one of which the contents of the first page have been copied by John Mac Namee, 1698, that page having even then been almost illegible. On another of these leaves another copy of the same is written by Eugene O'Curry, 1842.

The last page in the volume is wholly illegible.

In addition to the paper leaves enumerated above there are 4 after the year 1061, but there is there no chasm in the original.

O'Curry discovered the continuation of these Annals to the year 1590 in the British Museum, Clar. xlv. 4792, and his copy of this is inserted in the present volume.

The work was edited by W. M. Hennessy in the Master of the Rolls' series in 1871.

Caithreim Toirdhealbhaigh, or victories of Torlogh O'Brien (see No. 1292, f. 15), 3 vols., pp. 438.

These volumes also contain pedigrees of various branches of the O'Brien family which have been already noticed in Nos. 1281, 1291, and the following poems.

Vol. 3, p. 401. Poem by Maoilin Oge Mac Brody on the history of the O'Loughlins of Burren, beginning: O ċeaṫṙar ɡluaiṙiḃ ɡaoiḋil, composed in the year 1594, followed by a prose account in English taken from the poem and written by the transcriber of the volume, Maurice Gorman.

p. 415. Poem by Hugh Boy Mac Curtin commemorating the noble descent and patrimony of Torlogh O'Loughlin Burren, beginning: Cṙann oṙ ɡach coill cṙaoḃ Ḃaṁna.

p. 423, l. 9. List of ancient Irish words with explanations.

p. 425. Poem by Maoilin Oge Mac Brody on the genealogy and history of the O'Gormans of Clare, beginning: Ꝺeoṗaiꝺ ṗonna ṗlioċt Caṫaoiṗ. The transcriber of these volumes was Maurice O'Gorman.

The Book of Ballymote (incomplete copy).

The original vellum Book of Ballymote, written about 1400 and formerly (1688) belonging to Trinity College, is now in the library of the Royal Irish Academy, to which it was presented by the Chev. O'Gorman in 1785. The text has been published in facsimile by the Academy under the editorship of Dr Robert Atkinson.

The present copy was made in 1728 by Richard Tipper, of Mitchellstown, in the parish of Castleknock, of whom O'Reilly says, in his account of the contents of this MS., that 'to the industry of Tipper, the Irish scholar and antiquarian, is indebted for many copies of valuable antient MSS., which he made from originals that are either not extant or are locked up in libraries from the public.'

The numbers in brackets are those of the pages of the facsimile.

p. 1 begins an account of the six ages of the world.

p. 12. The poem of O'Huathgaili concerning the descendants of Noah, Reiꝺiꝯ ꝺaṁ a Ꝺe ꝺo niṁ.

p. 20. The synchronisms of Flann Mainistrech, followed (p. 26) by the poem, Nin mac bel ṗoꝯa na ṗiꝯ.

pp. 32–35 contain matter missing from the vellum book after folio 8.

p. 82, 12 begins the history of the kingdoms of Ireland. Incipit ꝺo ṗlaiṫuiṗaiꝺ Ċaṗion.

p. 89 (45*a*) begins with the end of a poem on the Boroma tribute.

p. 90, s. f. Gilla Coeman's poem: Ġiṗiu aṗꝺ iuiṗ na ṗiꝯ.

p. 100. List of the kings of Ireland from Laogaire to Roderic O'Conor.

p. 103. Gilla Modubda's poem on the succession of the Christian kings of Ireland. Only 46 lines are given, and l. 45 begins with Neói (for Ꝺeac of the vellum). Space is left for the rest of the poem.

pp. 109–130. Lists of the Christian kings of Ulster, Leinster, Connaught, and Munster, with poems on the same.

p. 131. Cormac's instructions to his son, with the instructions of the Brehon Fithil to his son.

pp. 136–140. The Triads. The portion missing from the vellum after p. 66 is found here supplied from another copy.

pp. 141–377. Genealogies of the various tribes and families of Ireland (p. 247, the Will of Cahir More).

pp. 378–390. Translation of Nennius on the history of the Britons and Picts.

On p. 390 is the date 1728, with the name of the copyist Richard Tipper.

p. 391 (233 a 8, 212–232 being omitted), prose account of four saints, sons of Owen Mac Murrogh. This tract, imperfect in the vellum, is here complete, ending at the bottom of 394.

p. 395 (247, the History of the Jews being omitted). Story of Conchobar.

p. 397. Story of the death of Nathi or Dathi, with the poems of Torna Eiges and Dorban on the cemetery at Cruachan.

pp. 399–461 are bound at the end of the volume.

p. 399. Names and epithets of the Irish kings.

pp. 409-411. Extracts from the Book of Glendalough, containing notices of the Attacotti, the poem, Ir op glan ir neam im gneim, and an account of the wonders of Ireland.

pp. 411–436 (257 a 46–266). Account of the death of Aithirne, with other tales, as in No. 1318.

p. 438 (289, the Book of Rights being omitted). On the various kinds of metre. Ends p. 450 with the words Suipgi mallpo (= p. 295 a 32).

pp. 451–461 are blank.

pp. 462–590 (349–410). The Dinnseanchus. On p. 590 is the subscription of the copyist, Richard Tipper, with the date 1727.

pp. 591–594 blank.

p. 595 (282). Bean Seanchus. History of famous women.

pp. 605–622. The book of Oghams. p. 618 contains additional matter.

p. 347. A religious composition entitled, 'Dialogue between the body and the soul.' Ends imperfect on p. 354.

'The volume is in the handwriting of Desmond O'Conor, who is most probably the translator of Keating's History of Ireland.'

1297 4to chart., c. 1715.

Miscellanea, chiefly Poems and Romance.

Transcribed by John Magauran, or Magovern, for Brian Maguire, who has written his own pedigree and praise on a flyleaf. Each tract is paged separately.

I.—Life of Manus and Giolla-iosa, sons of Donn More Maguire, 'exceedingly curious and valuable as illustrating the history of Fermanagh, and throwing light upon Irish manners and clanship in the 14th century.' 29 pp.

p. 30. An amatory poem by Dermot Mac Muireadhaigh, beginning: Mar peacaḋ a ḃean na mala ȝceaṙc ȝcomḋluıṫe. 2 pp.

II.—Life of St. Mogue, or Maidoc, 104 pp. He was first bishop of Ferns. According to O'Donovan he is still vividly remembered in the country of his birth (parish of Templeport, Cavan). This Life does not materially differ from that published by Colgan, but is more copious. The body of the narrative is prose, but several poems and extracts from poems are introduced, some of which are attributed to the saint himself, but are clearly later. The most remarkable are—

p. 10. Sȝeal oıle aır Aoḋ ḋaıṙḋe. Here the saint is called Aodh, Mo being a prefix (= my) often prefixed to the names of saints, and the names of ancient ecclesiastics were always thus changed upon entering holy orders. The diminutive og was added for the sake of affection, and thus Mo-Aodh-og became Maodhog = Mogue. This name, says O'Donovan, was very common in Ferns about 50 years ago as a christian name, but it is now modified to Moses.

p. 16. Poem of 104 lines, beginning: Cıoṙ Maoḋoıg ǥan meaṙacaḋ.

p. 27. Verses beginning: Ṫoırg Maoḋóıg ı ḋtır bṙeaṫan.

p. 34. Verses (68) beginning: Ła ḋa Maoḋoǥ ṙan ṫuılleann.

p. 62. Poem of 40 lines, beginning: Ca líon mıonn aǥ maoḋóǥ móṙ, on the relics left by St. Mogue.

p. 66. Poem of 76 lines by Giolla Modhuda, beginning: Leaċ ḃonn a ḋtıǥ ǥaċ ṙáṫa. This recounts the dues paid to the successors of St. Mogue.

p. 69. Poem of 4 pp. on the life of St. Mogue, beginning: Seanċar Maoḋóıg meaḃṙaıǥ leaṫ.

p. 74. Poem of 116 lines, beginning: coṁpuınn Maoḋóıg ṙa moṙ moḋ. This states how St. Mogue's dues in Leinster, Ulster, and Connaught were divided among his coarbs in the churches of Ferns, Drumlane (Co. Cavan), and Rossinver (Co. Leitrim).

p. 77. Poem of 104 lines by Giolla Modhuda O'Cassidy on the judgments or curses left by St. Mogue on any of the Breifnians who should violate his churches, encroach on his lands, or dishonour his coarbs. Beginning: Cıḋeṙḃṙeaṫa Maoḋoıg ṁín.

p. 85. Poem of 208 lines, beginning: ḃınn an ṫıomna luaıṫeṙ lınn. In this is given the Will of the saint in which he disposes of the relics referred to above (p. 62). His Breac or speckled garment he leaves to the church of Rossinver, his Ministir or portable shrine to Drumlane, his black crozier to Ferns, his two bells to Drumlane, his white crozier to Rossinver, and his Mac Ratha (?) to be placed over his tomb at Rossinver.

p. 94. Poem of 180 lines by Giolla Modhuda O'Cassidy on the history and virtues of St. Mogue.

p. 102. Poem of 64 lines ascribed to St. Mogue, in which he denounces vengeance on all who should violate his churches, beginning: Maırg a ṙaıṙeóċar mo cıll ċáıḋ.

p. 103. Poem on the miracles by which St. Mogue lessened the powers of Fergal O'Rourke and his descendants, beginning: Maırg ḋan Comaṙṙa naoıṁ ǥaṙg, 'Woe to him whose neighbour is a fierce saint.'

III.—A romantic tale entitled: Bruighean Chaorthuinn or Palace of the rowan trees, composed about the 15th century. 20 pp.

IV.—Another tale entitled: Eachtra an Ghiolla deacair, 24½ pp., describing a chase by Finn Mac Cooil and his militia through Dromcollcoille (now Dublin).

V.—Another describing a chase by Finn Mac Cooil in Connaught, entitled, Bruighean Céise Corainn, 8 pp. Finn and his heroes are detained by magic in the caves of Keish Corran (caves well known to travellers).

f. 5. Poem written by an Irish priest in Spain, bidding farewell to Ireland, 1½ pp. This is followed by a ludicrous account of the clann of Thomas Mac Lobuis by Robert Nugent, 4 pp. By the clan of Mac Lobuis are here meant the English plebeians who obtained possessions in the time of Cromwell.

VI.—Historical tale entitled, Aoibeall Bruidhe, 18 pp.

f. 10 (numbered 9). A short religious poem by Bonaventura O'Hosey, beginning: Trí rátha brath ar mo bár.

VII.—A romantic tale entitled, Eachtra Cloinne rígh na hIoruaidhe. Adventures of the sons of the king of Norway. The scene is placed in Greece, Holland, etc. 62½ pp.

VII.—Another romantic tale entitled, Eachtra an macaoimh moir mac rígh na hEarrainne. Adventures of the great youth, the son of the king of Spain. The scene is in Ireland, and the supposed time the 3rd century. 21 pp.

f. 116. Romance entitled, Bruighean Beag na h-Almhuine, i.e. the small enchanted palace of Allen. The actors are Finn Mac Cooil, Oisin, Oscar, etc. 9½ pp.

VIII.—Romantic tale entitled Eachtra Ridire na Leomhan. Adventures of the knight of the lions. The hero is a French knight. 134 pp.; ending imperfect.

IX.—Another romance, entitled Eachtra an amadáin mhoir. Adventures of the great Oaf. 38 pp.; ending imperfect.

Genealogical and Historical Collections.

The first 69 folios (numbered for the most part by columns) contain pedigrees, partly metrical, of sundry ancient Irish families. (The metrical parts are: 190, on the O'Kellys of Hy-Many; 194, on the same; 196, by John O'Dugan (d. 1370) on the descendants of Niall of the Nine Hostages; 210, by the same on the history of the O'Kellys of Hy-Many; 213, an alliterative composition by the same in praise of Teige O'Kelly; 221, by the same, on the history, etc., of the kings of Meath, transcribed by Lucas O'Dallan; 227 begins with a fragment of a poem on the famous women of Ireland; 228, a poem addressed to a chief named Eogan (apparently Eogan O'Madden, of whose exploits an account is given in 206); 232, on the virtues of St. Kieran and on the history of Clonmacnoise, beginning: Paiter coímḋi ciaran; 236 to 238, on the history of the O'Kellys of Hy-Many.

This concludes the first part of the volume, which originally formed a distinct volume, and seems, says O'Donovan, to be a fragment of the Book of Hy-Many (Leabhar Hy-Maine), described by O'Reilly in his 'Irish Writers,' p. cxxi. The MS. described by O'Reilly was then in the possession of Sir W. Betham, from whom it was subsequently purchased by Sir Thos. Phillips. The next folio (formerly the outside one of a volume) has no writing on the recto. That and the following folio (both much injured by damp) contain the concluding part of a romantic tale.

p. 244 (as numbered, but really p. 143, most of the preceding numbers being of columns). A historical tale entitled, Oiḋe Ċuin ceḋcaṫaiḋ. Death of Con of the Hundred Battles.

p. 246. Some account of Con's grandson, Cormac.

p. 248. A romantic tale, entitled: Oiḋe Muirċeartaiḋ mic Ercae. Death of Muirchertach Mac Erca, said to be given as told by the saints Cairneach, Mocteus, and Kieran. 'We learn from it that St. Cairneach cursed the royal house of Cletty on the Boyne, and excommunicated king Muirchertach by ringing his bells and by other ceremonies, and that he also condemned the hill of Cletty to perpetual sterility. This the saint did at the request of Muirchertach's queen.'

p. 254. Notice of the battle of Clontarf.

Ibid., col 2. An ancient poem enumerating the heroes who fell at the battle of Clontarf, beginning: Ḃroḋar aḋur Ḃrian Ḃanba.

p. 256. Account of the burial of Brian Boru.

p. 258. Birth and labours of Hercules.

p. 300. Romantic tale about Sir Guy, Earl of Warwick and Bocigam (Buckingham?).

p. 348. Romantic tale about Bibus, son of Guy, Earl of Hamtuir, a territory divided from Scotland by a small river.

p. 364. Romantic tale about Giallchadh, king of Ireland (A.M. 3389, according to O'Flaherty), and his son Nuada.

p. 376 (begins what was formerly a distinct volume). Account of the civil wars of the Romans.

p. 418. Uḋaḋt Mopaın, or the Testament of Moran (chief judge to king Feradhach Fionnfachtnach, about A.D. 90).

p. 422. Translation of that part of Giraldus Cambrensis' 'Hibernia Expugnata,' which treats of the Geraldines.

p. 432. Account of the finding of the Holy Cross.

pp. 457–460. A fragment of another MS. containing the concluding part of the account of the Trojan war which is perfect in the Book of Ballymote. On the last column it appears that the transcript was furnished in 1479.

This volume, with Nos. 1302–1317 and 1319–1321, was presented by Sir John Sebright; they originally belonged to Edw. Lhwyd, whose autograph appears in this and some others. Many have also an impression of Lhwyd's seal in red wax.

1299 11″ × 8″, membr., s. xv (?).

Medical and physiological, etc.

p. 1. Medical treatise, beginning, 'Vita hominis est triplex et cetera.' 'The contractions are exceedingly difficult and intelligible only to those who have made them their particular study.' The first 25 pp. contain a physiological discourse on the functions of the brain, heart, and other organs, chiefly from Galen; but other physicians are also quoted. p. 25*b*, s. f., begins a treatise on diseases, chiefly from Galen. Ends imperfect; p. 34.

p. 36. Poem on the history of Ardbraccan, beginning: Ꝺıꝛꝺıḋ ꝑuaꝛ aḋollṫanaıꝺ (in a later hand).

p. 38. A tabular classification of diseases.

p. 39. Treatise on Astronomy on the Ptolemaic system, transcribed 1443; see p. 56.

p. 57 (in a different handwriting). A treatise on nature, beginning: 'Natura est principium motus et quietis.' The several sections begin with Latin headings, thus p. 61*a*, s. f., 'Sicut Plato quod tria fuerunt principia rerum.' p. 63*a*, s. f., 'Etiam declaravimus iuvameantum uniuscumque membri cecundum quod sufficiebat nobis.' p. 64*b*, s. f., 'Et eciam membra uertutis nutritiva et operationes sunt neccisaria in essi animalium et non generativa.' p. 66, 'Due sunt potencie cognosive in homine, sensus et intellectus.' p. 69. 'De actionibus ocultis naturi taractatur hic.' p. 71, 'De foirmis meidis.'

Annals of the Four Masters, Part I. (from A.M. 2242 to A.D. 1171), 2 vols., 4to.

The 'Four Masters' were Michael, Conary, and Cucogry (or Peregrine) O'Clery, and Ferfeasa (or Fergus) O'Mulconry. The designation 'Four Masters' was given to them by Colgan in the Preface to his 'Acta Sanctorum Hiberniae,' and was, perhaps, suggested to him by the fact that 'Quatuor Magistri' had been long previously applied by the medical writers of the middle ages to the Four Masters of the medical sciences (O'Donovan). Previously to Colgan the work had been called 'Annales Dungallenses,' having been compiled in the convent of Donegal, a Franciscan foundation. The work was undertaken under the patronage and for the use of Fergal O'Gara, Lord of Moy O'Gara and Coolavin, Co. Sligo, the original dedication to whom, in the handwriting of Michael O'Clery, is in the copy in the Royal Irish Academy. It was begun 22nd Jan., 1632, and finished 10th August, 1636. In the same copy is the original testimonium signed by the superiors of the convent, in which are enumerated the works collected and used by the compilers, which were, the Annals of Clonmacnoise, Annals of the Island of Saints, on the Isle of Rive [these two only came down to 1227], Annals of Senat Mac Magnus on the lake of Erne (now called the Ulster Annals), Annals of the O'Maolconarys, Annals of Kilronan, compiled by the O'Duigenan, also the Annals of Lecan, compiled by the Mac Firbises. For the later parts of the work are mentioned also the Book of Cucogry O'Clery (1281 to 1537), the Book of Maolin Og Mac Bruodin (1588 to 1603), the Book of Lugad O'Clery (1586 to 1602).

These two volumes were transcribed by Hugh O'Molloy, from the autograph in the possession of Chas. O'Conor of Belanagare for Dr. John O'Fergus, in the year 1734–5. They are paged continuously, vol. i., ending with p. 536; vol. ii., containing pp. 537 to 1023. Prefixed to the first volume are copies of the dedication and the testimonia.

Annals of the Four Masters, Part II. (1335 to 1608).

This is an original copy, that is to say, it is for the most part in the handwriting of Conary O'Clery, the hands of the other two O'Clerys, however, appearing frequently throughout the volume (O'Donovan, Introductory Remarks, p. xviii.).

There is a considerable quantity of inserted matter in the handwriting of Roderick O'Flaherty, author of 'Ogygia,' to whom the Annals were lent and explained by his tutor, Duald Mac Firbis, the last of the hereditary antiquaries of Lecan. 'His insertions are very valuable, for two reasons, because the work from which he took them is no longer extant, and because we have his authority for the meaning of many now obsolete terms.' We next find the volume in its present imperfect state in the possession of John Conry, of Dublin, in 1724 (see Abp. Nicolson's account of Conry's MSS. in his Irish Historical Library). After Conry it came into the possession of Dr. John Fergus, or O'Fergus, of Dublin, who had it bound in 1739.

The first fol. is numbered 687, the last 1150, but there is some irregularity in the numbering.

The Royal Irish Academy possesses what is apparently the original autograph of the entire work, 'being the very copy which passed from the representatives of the O'Gara family into the hands of Chas. O'Conor.' It was presented to that body in 1831 by Dr. Geo. Petrie, who had bought it at the sale of Col. Burton Conyngham's library.

No doubt, as O'Donovan observes, each of the Four Masters made a copy, of which he afterwards disposed, and he adds, that 'it will yet be discovered that there is another copy at Louvain, which O'Clery made for the use of Colgan, who first sent him to Ireland to collect materials for his 'Acta Sanctorum.'

The text of the Annals was first published complete by Dr. John O'Donovan, who added an English translation and a large body of learned annotations. 7 vols., 4to; Dublin, 1851.

1302 fol. membr., s. xvi., ff. 7.

A treatise on diseases, and particularly fevers.

Beginning: 'Morbus est cum membra actionis sui (sic) naturalis temperamenta egrediuntur'; impf.

This agrees, word for word, with the tract mentioned above (No. 1299, p. 25 b).

This and the following 12 items are in a case.

Discourse on the Ten Commandments.

p. 11*b*. A brief history of the Creation and the patriarchs, from the Old Testament.

1305 fol. membr., ff. 16.

Fragment of the Uraicept na n-eigeas or Primer of the Bards.

Giving declensions of nouns, conjugations of verbs, etc., with examples from early Irish poets, see No. 1289, p. 506. In a cover made up partly of two half leaves of a Latin Missal, and partly of mutilated leaves of Irish MSS.

1306 fol. membr., s. xv., ff. 12.

Medical.

Part of a treatise on the operations of various medicines, written in syllogistic style. The first question proposed is 'Does pepper act according to the active power in warming?' Imperfect at the beginning.

1307 4to chart. et membr.

Two Irish metrical glosses, viz. O'Dugan's Foras Focal, and that by Rev. Patr. O'Cuirnin, beginning: Ꝺeirḃḟiur ḋo'n eagna in éigri.

Written in 1698 by Eoghan Mac Gilleoin for the use of Mr. Lochlin Campbell. 8 ff., chart.

This is enclosed in 2 leaves of vellum, containing part of the story of the finding of the Holy Cross.

1308 4to memb., ff. 10.

I.—The Dialogue of the Two Sages.

A contest between Neide and Ferceirtne for the position of Ollamh. It has an interlinear gloss, and an account of the tract precedes it.

II.—p. 10*b*. Rules for various kinds of versification.

Ends imperfect.

1309 4to membr., ff. 8.

Fragment of Biblical History.

1314 4to membr.

Miscellaneous Fragments.

1. Fragment of the account of the combat between Cuchullin and Ferdia at the ford of Ardee; ff. 2.

2. Fragment of a treatise on simple and compound medicines. ff. 6; much mutilated.

3. On prosody, etc. 1½ ff.

1315 fol. membr., ff. 112.

Medical and Miscellaneous.

pp. 1 to 4 (much injured by damp) contain an explanation in Irish of Latin medical terms.

p. 5. Explanation of the ten Predicaments.

p. 11 (in a comparatively modern hand). The Rosg or Battle Ode, said to have been addressed to the champion Goll in the battle of Maghra. Published by Miss Brooke in her 'Reliques of Irish Poetry.' This copy differs in many words from hers.

p. 13. Ode addressed to Hugh O'Neill, chief of the Northern Hy-Niall, enumerating the rights and duties of the king, beginning: Ceapc ȝaċ ṗi cu ṗéil ḃo claṅaiḃ Neill náiṗ.

Amongst the duties are, not to remain one year without giving battle or taking a spoil, and to make Lagenians pay him the Borumean tribute. O'Donovan thinks the O'Neill addressed was the celebrated Hugh, who lived in the reign of Elizabeth. O'Curry assigns him the date, A.D. 798, and says the poet was Fothaidh na Canoine. This copy is in a comparatively modern hand.

p. 14. A tree of philosophy giving the classification of the sciences and the names of their inventors.

p. 15. Alphabetical treatise on Materia Medica.

p. 70. Fragment of a Latin grammar in the Irish language. This only extends to the third declension of nouns, but copious examples are given, the Latin nouns being translated into Irish. Published by Dr. Whitley Stokes for the Irish Archæol. and Celtic Society, under the title, 'Irish Glosses, a Mediæval tract on Latin Declension,' Dublin, 1860.

p. 78 begins a medical treatise on diseases.

p. 123. On the preservation of health.

p. 184 (in a comparatively modern hand). Another medical treatise on various kinds of food, classified first according to taste, and secondly according to substance, whether vegetable or animal. The heads of the chapters are given in Latin. O'Donovan thinks the treatise is a translation of or commentary on a work by the physician Isaac.

1316 fol. membr., s. xiv.

Brehon Laws and Miscellanea.

This and the following number were formerly bound together, the vellum and paper being mixed. The old paging is in brackets.

p. 1. Fragment of a medical work on the effect of medicines, 14″ × 10″, ff. 5. The folios, having at some former time been folded in two, are much injured in the middle.

p. 11. Portions of the Seanchus Mór. Treatises on the laws relating to divisions of tribes in a territory, also those relating to bees, to mills and watercourses, of the seven grades of poets; part of the Cain Aigillne; the Corus bescna, etc. The text is accompanied with a copious interlinear gloss. At the top of p. 11 Edw. Llwyd has written his name and the words 'Liber 2^{us} constat fol. 28.'

The Seanchus Mór is said to have been compiled by three Kings, three Brehons, and three Bishops in the time of St. Patrick, who was one of the three bishops. The heading in this MS. is in a modern hand, which O'Donovan thought to be that of Duald Mac Firbis. There are three distinct fragments, in all, 26 ff., 14″ × 10″. At the bottom of p. 36 is a memorandum in Irish, written by Hugh, son of Conor Mac Egan, in the year 1350, which he calls the second year of the plague. A second memorandum containing a prayer for preservation of himself and friends through this plague, is dated Christmas night, and in it Hugh Mac Egan says that he wrote this 'in his own father's book.'

p. 67. A historical fragment. Begins impf. with an account of the demolition of Conaing's Tower on Tory Island, which is followed by an account of the blinding of king Cormac Mac Art, and of the expulsion of the Desii from Meath.

p. 68*b*, l. 12. A religious legend about a soul released from purgatory, with a short poem repeated by the 'brightened' spirit.

Ibid. l. 40. Account of the royal road of Alexander the Great. This is followed by a memorandum stating that this was written in the winter in which Donchadh O'Kennedy assumed the Archbishopric of Cashel. This archbishop died A.D. 1252.

p. 69. Death of Cuan, son of Ailchin.

Ibid. b, l. 35. Life of Michael the archangel. In the style of a sermon. Begins: Milia milium ministrabant ei decimilies; proceeding then in Irish.

p. 71. A fragment of 8 ff. in smaller folio, 12″ × 9½″, containing first, 'The Dialogue of the Two Sages' (see No. 1308).

p. 78*a*. s. f. On the seven degrees of the poets; ends impf.

pp. 87, 87*, 2 ff. 8″ × 6″, containing a fragment of the Latin text of Ezekiel, beginning ch. xxviii. 15–16, followed (without a break) by ch. xxxv. 1 sqq. The 2nd folio begins with 'undique,' ch. xxxix. 17, and continues to xl. 6. The verso passes to ch. xliv. 1. The latter part is illegible.

pp. 88, 88*. One folio of a MS. on genealogy and history, the first page is almost illegible; the second treats of Cairbre Liffechair, and of the descendants of king Cahir Mor.

p. 89. A fragment of a book on Civil Law in Latin; 1 folio.

p. 91. f. 1. Treating of genealogies.

p. 93. f. 1. Fragment of the history of Troy.

p. 95. f. 1. Fragment of a sermon on Mary Magdalene.

p. 97. Account of the deluge and the early history of the Jews, including (p. 388) a poem on the succession of the patriarchs, beginning: Ꞇchaip caich cuimpiȝ nimi an pi uapal aingliui. At the end a printed Calendar.

p. 103. f. 1, mutilated.

p. 105. The Heptads; imperfect at the beginning.

1317 fol 13″ × 8″, chart.

Glossaries and Miscellanea.

pp. 1–8. Consists of small fragments.

pp. 9, 10. Fragment of a medical treatise.

pp. 11, 12. Fragment of a Glossary.

p. 13 (91). 14 ff. The Glossary of Cormac, Abp. of Cashel (d. A.D. 903), transcribed for Donogh by a scribe named Fland, who, on p. 114, writes, 'O Donnchadh, it is a great shame for thee to ask me to write on St. Finnain's day, I Fland.' The glossary ends p. 115; the first two leaves are much mutilated.

Cormac's Glossary was edited by Dr. Whitley Stokes ('Three Irish Glossaries,' London, 1862. He calls this copy Codex C). On the verso of the last folio is a letter from Dongalach O'Riardan to O'Kennedy, on behalf of a poor man to whom, it would seem, O'Kennedy had refused to pay his wages.

p. 39 (116). 2 ff. Fragment of another Glossary, entitled, Ꞇuil laiṫne. It only extends to the letter G. A transcript of this by O'Curry is in No. 1338.

p. 43 (120). 8 ff. Another Irish Glossary on a larger scale, defective at the beginning. It wants all of A, and B and part of C. The part containing S, T, U is much injured and mutilated. Examples are given to establish the meaning of the words. This is O'Davoren's Glossary, written A.D. 1569, copied (according to O'Curry) by Duald Mac Firbis. Published from a vellum MS. in the British Museum by Dr. Whitley Stokes.

p. 59 (135). ff. 9. A short account of Adamnan, 8th Abbot of Iona; followed by an imperfect copy of the Visio Adamnani, with Latin and English translations.

p. 75 (153). f. 1. Poem on the family of O'Dowd of Tireragh. Imperfect.

p. 77 (155). ff. 27. Another copy of Cormac's Glossary (edited by Dr. Whitley Stokes, Codex D). The handwriting is that of Duald Mac Firbis (O'Curry). There are corrections and insertions by a later hand.

p. 102 id. a. l. (178). Fragment of an etymological tract, extending only to the letter C. It begins; Incipit discreptio (sic) de origine Scoticae linguae. There is a perfect copy of this Glossary in No. 1318.

p. 105 (181), ff. 9. An imperfect copy of the 'Uracept' of Kinfaela; see No. 1289.

p. 131, ff. 11. Fragment of the Irish Law Glossary referred to by Duald Mac Firbis in the preface to his (MS.) genealogical work as his 'Law Glossary,' and in his handwriting. This fragment treats of the laws relating to poets. There is a transcript by O'Curry. This is followed by a single-leaf treatise of Irish genealogies, in No. 1338.

p. 157 (229), ff. 76. A copy of the historical and topographical work called the Dinn Seanchus (see Book of Ballymote).

The Yellow Book of Lecain and Miscellanea.

The numbering is by columns, of which there are sometimes three in a page.

Col. 1, 2, and 125–128. Fragment of the Life of St. Fechin of Fore.

O'Donovan remarks that Ussher was in error when he stated in his Primordia that the Irish name of Fore was Baile Leabhar, 'Town of Books.' The local pronunciation of Baile Fhobhair, he says, sounds to an illiterate Irishman like Bail' leabhar.

There is annexed a transcript by O'Curry.

Col. 3–87. A good copy of Cormac's Glossary (see No. 1316, p. 91). This is the text called B by Dr. Whitley Stokes.

Col. 88–122. A perfect copy of the etymological tract mentioned in No. 1317, p. 102.

Col. 123, 124, one leaf containing the beginning of a romance called Bruidhen Da Derga (see col. 716 infra).

Col 128–216. Duanaire or Book of Miscellaneous Poems, written by Seanchan, son of Maelmuire O'Maelchonaire in 1473 (see col. 210). Most of the poems are by Teige O'Higgin.

Col. 217. On the observance of Sunday and other festivals

(see another copy, infra col. 957). There is also a copy in the Leabhar Breac.

Col. 221. Incipit Regula Mochuta Rathain; in metre.

Col. 227, l. 8. Rhapsody of the Irish prophet Bec Mac De.

Col. 228*b*, l. 17. The sayings of St. Fursa of Peronne.

Col. 229*a*, l. 42. The wise sayings of Flann Fina or Alfred, son of Oswy, king of Northumbria.

Col. 233. Poem of 96 lines by Flann Fina, describing things that he saw in Ireland. Translated by O'Donovan in the 'Dublin Penny Journal,' vol. i., p. 94. It begins: Robeab a n-imip find fáil.

Col. 234, l. 3. Testamentary precepts of Morand Mac Moen, chief Brehon of Ireland, to his monarch, Feradach the Just.

Col. 236. The Triads; enumerating the three most remarkable fairs, lakes, mountains, etc., in Ireland. See No. 1289.

Col. 244. Description of the Banqueting Hall of Tara, with a plan and a list of the persons who sat at the feast, and the parts of each beast allotted to the different classes. Published with translation in the 'Transactions' of the Royal Irish Academy, vol. xviii., 1839, in a Memoir on the remains at Tara Hill by Dr. Geo. Petrie.

Col. 245. A poem on the same subject.

Col. 247. Short account of the twelve Apostles.

Col. 248. Poem ascribed to Cormac Mac Cullinan, bishop of Cashel, giving a number of proverbs; beginning: Eocain céille coipteacte, followed by an account of an apple tree planted by this Cormac, and still to be seen in the time of the writer, but not in O'Donovan's time.

Col. 249. Sketch of history of the Jews from Abraham to David.

Col. 281. Account of the battles and death of Congal, king of Ulster.

Col. 310–320. Tale entitled, 'The tragical fate of Muircheartagh mhic Erca.' Of this some account is given in the paper on the Hill of Tara above referred to. Part of cols. 317, 318 is blank. From a memorandum of the scribe at the end it appears that it was written by Morogh O'Cuindilis, 'the second year after the coming of the king of the Saxons (Richard II.) to Ireland, who left it without coming to terms of peace.' He notes that there was a great plague on men and cattle in the same year.

Col. 320, l. 14. Poem ascribed to Columcille, beginning: M'oenapan bam ip in fiaib. Published in the Miscellany of the Irish Archæological Society, vol. i.

Col. 321. Historical tale entitled, Fleḋ ḋúin na n-gédh agus cath Muighe Rátha, i.e. the Banquet of Dun na ngedh and Battle of Moira (fought A.D. 637). Published by the Irish Archæological Society.

Col. 332, l. 45. The first rann composed by Mac Liag, laureate of Brian Boru.

Col. 333. Names of the officers of the Fiana Eireann or Irish Militia under Finn Mac Cooil.

Col. 335. Short account of St. Cumain Fota, followed by a metrical dialogue between him and St. Comgan.

Col. 336, l. 6. Metrical prayer by St. Mael Isa O'Brallaghan (fl. s. xi.).

Ibid., l. 17. Litany addressed to Jesus. Attributed to St. Colga, or Colchu Mac Ua Dianechda, Lector of Clonmacnoise, ob. 789. Beginning: Aṫeoċ ṗiṫ a ihū noiḃ. Translated by O'Curry in the 'Irish Ecclesiastical Record,' vol. i., p. 4 sq.

Between 336 and 337 is a small scrap of vellum containing inter alia the statement that 'this year a swarm of butterflies came into Iar Connaught, so that they left not a leaf on any oak tree in O'Flaherty's country.'

Col. 338, l. 4. Another very ancient litany addressed to the Holy Trinity, beginning: O Deus Pater omnipotens, Deus exercituum, miserere nobis.' The rest is Irish. There is a copy of this in the Bodleian Library.

Ibid. b, l. 4. List of Archbishops of Armagh from St. Patrick to Giolla Mac Liag or Gelasius.

Ibid. b, 69. Short genealogical account of the Clan Breasail.

Col. 339. Account of the rights and privileges of the chieftains of Muscraighe.

Col. 340. A prophecy fathered on St. Moling, headed Baile Molinġ, beginning: aṫbeṗim liḃ a Laiġniu.

Col. 341. Account of the marriage of Eogan Mor and the birth of Oilill Olum.

Col. 343, l. 31. Various extracts.

Col. 344, l. 31. Account of celebrated trees of Ireland prostrated by a storm in the year 665.

Ibid., l. 54. Account of St. Bec Mac De.

Col. 345, ff. 6. Fragment of the Tale of Tain Bo Flioghais. (In O'Donovan's time one leaf of this was in another volume). There is another copy in No. 1287, p. 347.

Col. 365–368. A short account of the brother and five sisters of St. Patrick.

After col. 368 is inserted a letter (in English) written by Thaddæus Roddy of Crossfield, Co. Leitrim, in the year 1700, about Irish Antiquities, Books, etc. (chart, ff. 9).

Published in the 'Miscellany' of the Irish Archæological Society. On the last page is a criticism by Chas. O'Conor of Belanagare.

Col. 370 begins a fragment consisting of 8 ff. In a note at the foot of 380, 381 we read: . . . . Leabar buide leacain ainm an leabair ro. Meiri Cirruaid mac Taidg ruaid, i.e. 'The Yellow Book of Lecan is the name of this book. I Kirroe, the son of Teige Roe.' Some words seem to have preceded leabar, but only two or three letters are traceable.

Col. 370 A Romance headed: Incipit do imram churaig Maelduin, i.e. 'The navigation of the coracle of Muldoon.' See W. Stokes, Rev. Celt. ix. p. 447.

Col. 391, l. 16. A Romance entitled: imrum Snédgusa agus mic Ragla.' (Ibid. p. 14.)

Col. 395, l. 37. A Romance entitled: Imram Brain mic Febuil (published by Prof. Meyer, Grimm Library, No. 4).

Col. 400, l. 26. Cáchtha Chonbla ruaid mic Cuind Chetchathaig, 'The Adventures of Conla Roe, son of Con of the Hundred Battles'; published by Windisch in his Grammar. Ends imperfect on col. 400, after which several lines have been erased. At the bottom is the memorandum, 'Iste liber in se continet centū lxv^{a} folia.'

Col. 401 begins a fragment consisting of 9 ff., and containing that part of the Dinnseanchus, which relates to the hill of Tara and Aicill and all down to Sliabh Mairge. There are also three small slips of vellum inserted.

Col. 437. A fragment consisting of 10 ff. of a Medical Treatise dealing with Wounds and Ulcers; Diseases of the Nose; of the Teeth and Mouth; of Hernia, etc.

Col. 477. Fragment of a commentary on the seventh book of the Aphorisms of Hippocrates, f. 7. The penultimate page gives the name of the scribe 'Gillapatrick Albanach,' and the date A.D. 1413.

Col. 500 begins the Leabhar Ollamhan, which comprises the Uracept; an account of the Ogams, etc. (ff. 18½) written in 1408. The scribe has written (in Irish) several curious notes at the bottom of some of the pages, e.g. col. 508, 'methinks, O school, it is well I have gotten the candle from you by scheming.' Col. 518, 519, 'This is a page I wrote on St. Nicholas' night, and all the school idle except myself, and may God forgive this to me and to the woman that gave me light, i.e. Sheela.' Col. 520, 521, 'This is a bad page, the worst of all, and bad luck to the woman who is in fault who set my mind from one land to another.'

Col. 549 begins a beautiful copy of the Dialogue of the Two Sages, with a copious interlined gloss. See No. 1308.

Cols. 570–572 contain a catechism, beginning with the maxims of Fursey.

Col. 573–958 is probably a part of the Yellow Book of Lecan (ff. 99). It contains the following tracts:—

Col. 573. The Táin bó Cuailgne, beginning imperfect, with Conpoipc obaip, per pene. Ends imperfect at the bottom of col. 619.

Col. 620. Account of the heroes who flourished under Oiliol and Meave, king and queen of Connaught, and their battles and Tain Bo's or cattle spoils. See Irische Texte, ii. 2, pp. 189, 225, 241.

Copies of these tales have already been mentioned under No. 1287, but the present MS. is a superior copy.

Col. 662, l. 13. Account of the Patriarchs from the Old Testament.

Col. 680 begins the Amhra Columcille, written by Dallan Forgaill, containing also a long preface and a copious interlined gloss. See No. 1288, f. 54.

Col. 700 s. f. A homily called Teanga Bithnua, giving an account of the creation of the world, of hell, and of various places, animals, etc., in the East. Probably a translation.

After 705 four cols. are left unnumbered.

Col. 707 (as numbered), l. 29, Gaċtra cleṙech Ċolumcille, 'The Adventures of Columcille's clerics.'

Col. 716. A historical tale entitled, Toġail bruiṅne da ṅearg, 'Destruction of Bruidhean da Dearg,' which was the palace of king Conary I., who was burned in it by a band of invaders headed by three native desperadoes (A.D. 60).

Between 731 and 732 are four paper leaves, one of which contains an account of Brian Boru, of the forts, monasteries, Round Towers, etc. The others are almost unintelligible.

Col. 740. Incipit do Suiṅiuġuḋ Tellaich Temra, said to have been recited at Tara in the days of Dermot Mac Fergusa Ceirbheoil by the mythical Finta, who lived from before the deluge to the 6th century.

Col. 749, l. 20. Story called Loingeas Mac n-Uisleand, 'The expulsion of the sons of Uisleand.' This is the most ancient form yet discovered of the Tale of Deirdre. Published from this MS. with a more modern version by Theophilus O'Flanagan in the 'Transactions' of the Gaelic Society, 1808. Also by O'Curry, in the Atlantis, iii. p. 387.

Col. 754 begins an account of the plundering of the Lagenian palace of Dinn Righ (A.M. 3682 according to O'Flaherty). The site of this palace of Dinree is still to be seen near the river Barrow, not far from Old Leighlin, where it is shown on Mercator's Map of the Barony of Idrone.

Col. 756, s. f. Story entitled, Eṗṗnaḋ ċṡi buicheaḋ, 'Groans of the House of Buichead.' Buichead is said to have flourished in the 2nd century.

Col. 759, l. 5. Historical tale entitled, Ṗleḋ bṗicṗenḋ ⁊ loingeṗ mac n-Duilnḋeṗmaiṫ, 'The Banquet of Bricreann and the banishment of the sons of Duildermot.' There is a very ancient copy of this in the Leabhar na hUidhri (R.I.A.). (Irische Texte, ser. i., p. 164.)

Col. 765, s. f. Story entitled, Ṫochmoṗc bec ṗola, 'The courtship of Bec Fola,' a beauty who flourished in the middle of the 7th century. See O'Grady's Silva Gadelica, p. 85.

Col. 768, l. 36. List of the chiefs of the Fiana Eireann, or Irish Militia, under Finn Mac Cooil.

Col. 770*b*, l. 24. Account of the taking up of Enoch and Elijah into heaven.

Col. 772, l. 40. Stories from the life of David, king of Israel.

Col. 776, l. 47. Account of the deaths of Curai Mac Daire, of Caherconry, and of the celebrated beauty Blathnaid.

Col. 780, l. 27. Poem of 78 ranns by Flanacan, son of Ceallach, king of Bregia, beginning: Innid ṗcel ṗcaiṫcep naipiḋ. It tells the days of the week on which many catastrophes happened in Ireland.

Col. 781, l. 43. Short account of the battle feats of Cuchullin.

Col. 782. Short account of the Assembly of Druim Ceat. For a full account see No. 1288, f. 54.

Col. 783, l. 44. Account of the death of Niall of the Nine Hostages.

Col. 785, l. 21. Elegy, consisting of 15 ranns, on the death of Niall, by his foster-father Torna Eigeas and his foster-brother, beginning: In ṫan ḋo ċeiġmíṗ ḋo'n ḋáil.

Col. 786. Account of Enna Kinsellagh, the murderer of Niall.

Col. 808, l. 9. Account of the three persons in Ireland who spoke immediately after their birth.

Col. 810, l. 40. Description of the Banqueting Hall at Tara. See Petrie's account of Tara Hill in the Trans. R.I.A., vol. xviii., 1839.

Col. 811, l. 23. Poem on the sons of king Cormac.

Ibid., s. f. A short note on the dates of St. Patrick's birth, arrival in Ireland, and death.

Col. 812. Account of the Passion of our Lord.

Col. 839, l. 19. Life of the Blessed Virgin.

Col. 844. Account of the fall of the Angels and the expulsion of Adam from Eden.

Col. 849. Account of the death of John the Baptist, and of the miracles wrought by his head. On col. 851 is a request to the reader to pray for the scribe Mac Firbis.

Col. 852–857. A tract entitled, 'Dialogue of the soul and body.'

Col. 857 fin., the scribe has recorded his name and the date of his writing, 'A prayer for Gilla Iosa, son of Donogh More Mac Firbis, who wrote this book in the year 1380 A.D.' Lecan was the seat of the Mac Firbises who were hereditary bards to the O'Dowds, but whether this is a part of the particular book called the Leabhar Buidhe, or Yellow Book, cannot be certainly proved. The handwriting is not the same as that of the fragment earlier in this volume.

Col. 858. A short account of St. Columcille and of Aidan, son of Gabhran, king of Scotland.

Ibid., l. 23, begins a tract entitled, Precepts of Gregory of Rome.

Col. 860. Account of the life of the same Pope.

Col. 863, l. 38. 'Instructions of king Solomon.'

Col. 869, l. 9. Life of Michael the Archangel. The two following pages are not numbered.

Col. 869*b* contains a poem of 15 ranns on the 17 wonders which appeared on the night of Christ's birth. At the bottom of this page is a memorandum by a later Mac Firbis comparing his own writing with that of the scribe of the MS. This is followed by a note written by Charles O'Conor, A.D. 1770, at Dublin.

On the same page, col. 2 (left blank by the original scribe), is a notice in English by Edmund Burke: 'These last words written when the manuscript was sent to Ireland in 1776, E. Burke.'

This 1776 is obviously an error for 1770.

On the next unnumbered page begins an account of the death of Dermot, son of Fergus Ceirbheoil, in prose and verse. See O'Grady's Silva Gadelica, p. 72.

Col. 875, l. 28. Account of the migration of the tribe called Ciarraighi into Connaught.

Col. 902, l. 41. Historical Tale entitled, Adventures of Eochy Moyvaine.

Col. 906, l. 9. Legend about the Irish Druid Mogha Ruith Magus, said to have assisted Simon Magus in opposing the Apostle Peter.

Col. 907. Account of the cities in the North of Europe in which the Tuatha De Danann taught magic and other matters before they came to Ireland, and of some remarkable monuments which they brought with them. Followed by a poem on the same subject, a copy of which is published in Halliday's edition of Keating's 'History of Ireland,' vol. i., p. 202.

Col. 908. Short account of Finnachta, king of Connaught, who abdicated and embraced a monastic life, followed by a poem called his Baile or prophetic rhapsody, beginning: Tiçra bin in bonn berg.

Col. 909, l. 12. Account of Cruachain, the royal palace and pagan cemetery of the kings of Connaught. O'Donovan states that on visiting the locality of Croghan, in 1837, he was able to identify at once the grave of Dathi, last pagan monarch of Ireland, by means of the description here given.

Col. 910, l. 4. Poem by Torna Eigeas, the tutor of Niall of the Nine Hostages, on the names of the pagan kings of Ireland buried on Croghan, beginning: Dá fúrra in find fáil. This is followed by an account of the pagan burial places at Tailtean (Teltown), in Meath; of Brugh na Bóinné, near Slane, in the same county, and of the pagan cemeteries of Munster.

Col. 911, s. f. Story entitled, Compert Mongain, 'The birth of Mongan'; followed on col. 912, l. 30, by another story in which Mongan is stated to be (by metempsychosis) Finn Mac Cumhaill.

Col. 913, l. 42. Another story of Mongan.

Col. 914, l. 24. Mongan's Baile or prophetic rhapsody.

Miscellanea.

This volume is made up of various fragments, some quarto, some small folio, of various ages, and treating of different subjects.

The first 82 pp. are on paper, and contain a translation of some Latin work treating of the Passion of Christ, with pious meditations. On p. 29 is inserted a fragment consisting of four leaves, and containing an account of the martyrdom of St. Catherine. On p. 45 is a fragment of a religious poem. The rest of the volume is vellum.

The next fragment beginning with p. 83 consists of 3½ leaves of a medical work treating of boils, etc. (small folio). Half the first leaf has been cut off, and the first page (not numbered) is wholly illegible. It appears to be of the 15th century.

p. 90. Fragment consisting of eleven leaves, small folio, of the same age as the last. Contains a curious account of the Belgic and Tuatha De Danann colonies, and a very circumstantial account of the battle of Magh Tuiredh (Moytura), fought between these colonies near Cong, where many of the monuments here mentioned still remain. On p. 99, col. 2, line 16, the scribe has given his name, Cormac O'Cuirnin.

p. 99, col. 2, l. 21. Account of the Passion of Christ.

p. 111. Fragment of the tale called Breisleach Mhor Mhuighe Muirtheimne, i.e. the great defeat of the plain of Muirthemne in which Cuchullin was killed.

p. 119. Fragments consisting of 27 leaves, 4to, treating of the early history of Greece, of Jason and the golden fleece. p. 127 begins the destruction of Troy. This consists of two fragments, circa 1400. The first corresponds with Dares Phrygius, ed. Meister, from end of cap. 2 to cap. 11 incl., and from cap. 14 to middle of cap. 19, but with much additional matter; the second begins with the end of cap. 20 and continues to cap. 44. See Book of Leinster and Stokes' Irische Texte, Leipz. 1884. This fragment is separately bound in a cover consisting of leaves of vellum, containing some ancient writing.

p. 171. Nine leaves belonging to the great Book of Lecain.

The great Book of Lecain was in this Library in 1688; when the first extant Catalogue of MSS. was compiled (the same Catalogue, a copy of which was supplied to Bernard for his 'Catalogus'). At that time these nine leaves were wanting; see Bernard, No. 257. It seems to have been carried to France in the reign of Jas. II., and in 1787, through the Abbé Kearney, of Paris, it was presented to the then recently founded Royal Irish Academy, in whose Library it is now preserved. By a singular fate, the nine leaves which were missing in 1688 have found their way to the shelves where the remainder of the book formerly stood.

p. 172. An account of the Britons translated from Nennius. Imperfect at the beginning.

p. 174*a*, l. 83. The Wonders of Britain, from Nennius.

p. 174*b*, l. 35. Account of the origin of the Picts. This tract was published with a translation by Chas. O'Conor of Belanagare, in Pinkerton's 'Enquiry into the History of Scotland.'

p. 175. Names of the 28 cities of the Britons.

Ibid., col. a, s. f. A short account of the Division of the World between the sons of Noah.

p. 175*b*, l. 12. Account of the origin of the Picts.

p. 176*a*, l. 15. Poem on the origin of the Picts, beginning: Cruithuich cid dur forglaim.

p. 177*a*, l. 8. Poem on the origin of the Gael by Maelmara of Faban, beginning: Canum bunadur na n-Gaedel, see No. 1289, p. 28. These poems are printed in the Irish version of Nennius, published by the Irish Archaeological Society.

p. 178. Dialogue between St. Columcille and a young man at Carric Eolairg.

p. 179. Instructions of Cormac Mac Art to his son Cairbre Lifeachair.

p. 181. col. 4, l. 15. The Proverbs or Wise sayings of Fithil, who was judge to king Cormac.

p. 183, col. 2, l. 17. The Irish Triads. See No. 1317; col. 236.

p. 185. The Dialogue of the two Sages without the gloss.

Between pp. 187 and 192 are inserted two leaves in small folio and in a different hand from the larger folio, containing:—

p. 188. Pedigree of the Muinter Murchadha, or of the O'Flaherty, and an account of the tribes and territories in O'Flaherty's country.

p. 189*b*. A romantic tale entitled, The Death of Maccaoin More, son of the king of Spain. According to the story he was killed by Oscar, grandson of Finn Mac Cumhaill.

p. 195. An imperfect copy of the Uracepht na n-Eigeas, or Primer of the Bards, small folio, written by different hands. On some pages, left blank by the original scribes, the following interpolations appear:—

p. 235. A poem on Aengus Magrath, composed by William O'Finain.

p. 237. A religious poem, beginning: Olc cuigtear cigluicte de.

p. 238, l. 18. Pedigree of O'Conor from Hugh, son of Dermot, up to Heremon, son of Milesius (in a comparatively modern hand).

p. 251*b*. Pedigree of O'Shaughnessy from Giolla dubh, son of Dermot, up to Eochy Moyvaine.

The Uracepht ends p. 278.

p. 279 to 301. Fragment consisting of 12 leaves, small folio, containing a Catalogue of plants, minerals, etc., used in medicine. The last four pages are nearly illegible. pp. 303–316 are absent; p. 302 and 317 have obviously been for a long time the outside leaves of the fragments to which they respectively belong.

p. 317. Fragment consisting of 8 ff., quarto. The subject is medicine, but the writing is much injured by dirt and damp.

pp. 334-349. Copy of the Tain Bo Coailgne, ff. 9, 4to; imperfect.

pp. 350–397. Imperfect copy of the work entitled, Cogad Gall le Gaedalaib, 'The war of the Galls with the Gaels,' containing an account of the principal battles fought between the Danes and the Irish, ending with that of Clontarf. See Dr. J. H. Todd's edition.

pp. 397*b*–435. In double columns, surrounded with lines in red ink; the capitals similarly coloured.

p. 397*b*, col. 1. Short account of St. Ciaran of Cluain Beoain.

Ibid., col. 2, l. 20. Anecdote of St. Moling.

p. 398*a*, l. 17. Anecdote of St. Fursey of Peronne.

Ibid., l. 34. Another anecdote of St. Moling.

Ibid., s. f. Anecdotes of Oena and Guaire Aidhne, king of Connaught.

p. 399*a*, l. 15. Anecdote of St. Cathusach of Mayo of the Saxons.

Ibid., l. 27. Genealogy of Joseph from St. Matthew's Gospel.

p. 400. Account of the Passion of our Lord.

p. 420. Short account of St. Columcille and Aidan, king of Scotland.

p. 423*b*, l. 20. Precept of Pope Gregory. See col. 858.

p. 428*b*. Pedigrees of Irish saints, beginning with St. Patrick.

p. 433. Some account of the reign of Charlemagne, a fragment.

p. 435. Invention of the Holy Cross, 4to, ff. 15.

p. 463. A historical tale, entitled: Carnad tige Buicedha, 'The distress of the house of Buicedha.'

p. 466, l. 9. Account of Manannan Mac Lir, and of the death of the poet Athairne of Binn Edair (i.e. Howth).

p. 468. A list of battles fought in Ireland. No dates.

p. 471. Account of the invasion of Britain by the Fomorians, a race of pirates so called in early Irish history.

p. 474. Account of the death of Conall Cearnach, the most celebrated of the heroes of the Red Branch.

p. 477. Part of the tale entitled, Togail bruigne da derga, 'The destruction of the fort of Da Dearga.' See No. 1318, col. 716.

pp. 482–485. Fragments of three poems treating of the Clann Donnell.

pp. 486, 487. Fragment treating of the meanings and derivations of grammatical terms, perhaps belonging to the Uracepht na n-Eigeas.

A Latin and Irish Dictionary by Richard Plunket of the Order of St. Francis.

The preface is dated Trim, 12th Sept., 1662; fol. interleaved.

The author states in his instructions for the reader that his authorities for the hard words were 'Michael O'Clery, Archbp. Flathri O'Mulconry, Doctor Keating, Parrthas an Avania, and an old vellum MS. in which I found a copy of the Foras Focal, and particularly Michael O'Clery's Sanasan Nua and the old vellum aforesaid, also Ceilidh na h-iosgaide leithe Mac an Iolair, the Madadh Maol and some lists of hard words, with many other authorities which I do not now remember and the common language for the greater part of the rest.'

This copy was transcribed (not very accurately) for Edward Lhwyd, who has added various notes. He used it in preparing his 'Archæologia' for the press. See another copy, post.

Two Medical Fragments; ff. 35.

The first fragment, which ends on p. 48, treats on fevers, boils, hernia, paralysis, dropsy, palpitation. On p. 26 is an entry to the following effect:—'This is the sum for which this book is pledged to John O'Cannavan, viz. two ounces, which he gave to the wife of Donnell O'Cannavan, in the presence of Maudlin, the daughter of Kennedy, and two bonnas (groats), which he asked of me again at the door of Nichol. O'Haroon's forge a quarter of a year afterwards, being 8 pence and two ounces in all.' p. 49 begins the second fragment. At col. 1, line 18, is the heading, 'Sextum Capitulum de ulceribus in auribus,' and 49, 2, l. 22, the heading shows that this, 'On diseases of the nose,' is the 3rd tract of the 3rd book. p. 52, 2, l. 21, the 4th tract begins, 'De passionibus oris.' p. 53, l. 45, begins, 'De Dolore Dencium.' p. 60, 2, l. 43, begins the 5th tract, 'De Cummunibus.' See No. 1317.

1322 4to maj. membr., ff. 36, s. xvi.

The Dinn Seanchus.

This work treats of the names of Irish lakes, mountains, etc. Transcribed by John O'Keenan, but with no indication of the date except that it was before Christmas, and that John O'Mulconry was sick at Ardkyle. O'Donovan says this John O'Mulconry kept a celebrated school at Ardkyle, near Six Mile Bridge, Co. Clare, in the reign of Elizabeth, and was the writer of an Ode addressed to Brian na Murtha O'Rouark, who, according to Lord Bacon, was, at his own request, hanged with a gad according to his own country fashion.

The work is supposed to have been first written about the year 550 by Amergin, son of Amalgaidh, chief poet to king Dermot, son of Fergus Ceirbheoil, who died 565, but this copy and all the others in this library have been enlarged by subsequent writers, some of whom lived in the 11th century, as Cuan O'Lochain, the chief lawgiver of Ireland, who was killed in the year 1024.

Treatises on Materia Medica.

The first consists of 30 ff. and 2 fragments of leaves, and contains a list of plants, trees, gum, etc., alphabetically arranged. It wants the beginning, and commences with 'Carduus benedicte,' but is perfect from that to the end. O'Donovan says it seems to be a translation of a little work on Materia Medica, which issued from the Medical School at Montpelier in 1303. At the bottom of pp. 32, 33 is an inscription in the 'Ogum Craobh' character.

The second tract, beginning 65, consists of 25 ff., and treats of the manner of preparing plants, etc., for use. It is not arranged alphabetically. On pp. 81 and 100 appears, in a later hand, the name of Dermod O'Sheil. The family of O'Sheil were hereditary physicians from a remote period. On the margin of several pages appears the name of John M'Namara, described more fully on p. 82 as 'of Torthill, near Castle-president, one of his Majesties Attorneys at Law, sworn lawyer in Tilliscourt, London.' 'This John was well known in Dublin as a collector of Irish MSS.'

This book was bought at Vallancey's sale in 1792. It is in a brass mounted binding with the arms of James I. on the sides, but it is clear that this binding originally belonged to a different book.

Historical Pieces.

This book is in the handwriting of Maurice Gorman.

The first 22 pp. contain part of the Annals of Innisfallen from 1120 to 1158. The continuation to 1183 (17 pp.) is placed by error of the binder at the end of the volume.

p. 23 begins extracts from the Leabhar na g-ceart or Book of Rights.

p. 36, l. 7. Account of the tributes paid by the Danes and people of Leinster to the king of that province.

p. 38. List of kings of Munster from Cormac Cas and Fiacha Muillecthan to Donnell Mor O'Brien.

p. 46. Some account of the early history of the Jews, followed by a sketch of the early history of Ireland and of the travels of the Milesians before their arrival here; also a synchronism of the Irish monarchs and events with the monarchs of the world in the handwriting of Dr. O'Sullivan.

Religious Pieces.

pp. 1–55. The Psalter or Rosary of the Blessed Virgin, with an explanation and instructions for performing the devotions.

p. 55, l. 12. Of the 12 Golden Fridays of the year on which it is most beneficial to fast on bread and water.

p. 57, l. 3. Of the miracles of St. Jordanus.

p. 59, l. 16. Of the advantages of hearing Mass.

p. 61. O'Daly Fionn's poem in praise of the Blessed Virgin, beginning: Soiġċeaċ ḃalṙaim ḃṙu Ṁuiṙe. Unfinished.

pp. 64–257. A treatise on the Mass, entitled Eochair Sgiath an Aifrinn, i.e. 'the key-shield of the Mass,' by Geoffrey Keating, D.D. Preceded by a preface which occupies pp. 64–91, in which the author enters into a controversy with Luther and Calvin. Dr. O'Conor mentions 3 copies of this work in the Stowe collection (vol. i., pp. 157, 192).

pp. 258–357. Another work by Dr. Keating, entitled, Ṫṙí ḃiorġaoiṫe an ḃáiṙ, 'The three sharp arrows of Death.'

p. 358. 'Speculum Peccatoris.'

p. 373, l. 11. Miracles of the Blessed Virgin.

p. 579, l. 7. Life of St. Thomas à Becket.

p. 595, l. 16. Life of St. Margaret, daughter of Theodosius.

p. 607. Life of St. Alexius.

p. 613. A controversial poem by Bonaventura O'Hosey, guardian of the Irish friars at Louvain. See another copy in No. 1297.

p. 621, l. 9. A religious poem, beginning: ḃeaġ naċ ḃ-ṫáinig mo ċéaṙma.

p. 625. Poem in praise of the Blessed Virgin, beginning: Maiṙġ ḃiúlṫaṙ ḃ'ingin Anna.

p. 628, l. 7. A religious poem, beginning: Naoṁa an obair iomráḋ ḋe.

p. 629. A moral poem, beginning: Mairg ṁeallur muirn an t-saoġuil.

p. 635, l. 9. Dialogue between the body and the soul. Ends on p. 645, and is followed by a copy (in a later hand) of 'Plearaca na Ruarcach,' with Dean Swift's translation of it. See Scott's edition of Swift's works, vol. xiv., p. 141. This is followed by a letter in English verse, written in 1720 to Dean Swift. These occupy 4½ pp. not numbered.

Medical Treatises (imperfect).

Lettered on the side 'Sillanus de Nigris in Almansorem.'

pp. 1–16. A Treatise on Materia Medica.

p. 17. On Diets, 'Isac in dietis particularibus.'

p. 20, 2, l. 8. A short treatise on Anatomy, taken from Lopos, Hippocrates, and Apollonius; ends impf. p. 26.

pp. 27–132. Treatise on the nature and treatment of Diseases, in a hand apparently of the middle of the 16th century.

p. 133 begins a fragment of a treatise on Materia Medica arranged alphabetically, but it wants all before 'Aristotle' and all after 'Consolida minor.'

The names of some hereditary physicians appear in the margin, viz. p. 141, 'Gilla na naomh O'Fergusa is the owner of this book' (about s. xviii.), and p. 143, 'William Oge O'Callanan' asks for the prayer of the reader (about s. xvii.). Both the O'Ferguses and the O'Callanans were hereditary physicians.

p. 146. Some person began to write the genealogy of O'Cannavan, one of the hereditary physicians of West Connaught.

Vocabularies, etc.

1. Copy of an Irish vocabulary compiled in 1706 by Rev. Fras. Wallis, Lecturer in Divinity in the College of St.

Anthony of Padua, belonging to the Irish Franciscans of Louvain. This is a reversion of O'Clery's vocabulary of difficult Irish words; the easy words being in this arranged first. pp. 142.

pp. 145–152. Explanations in metre of several ancient Irish words, beginning: Peaᵭ ainm ᵭ'iomᵭa iaᵭ fin.

pp. 153–164. The words in the preceding poem explained in dictionary order.

pp. 164–168 blank.

pp. 168–324. The more modern form of the Uraicepht or Primer of the Bards. The Uraicepht is said to have been originally written by Fortchern (fl. A. M. 3950). The present copy is in the handwriting of the scribe who copied the Annals of the Four Masters for Doctor Fergus.

Keating's History of Ireland.

Transcribed by Maurice O'Conor, who commenced the transcription in 1699.

1333 4to membr., s. xv.

Medical.

p. 1. After a few verses on Teige, son of Roderick O'Conor, follows a table of Latin abbreviations used in the work.

p. 5. Commentary on the Aphorisms of Hippocrates. Wants the first 13 Aphorisms and a little at the end.

pp. 79–104. Another fragment of a medical treatise, ff. 13. The last page is illegible.

1334 4to maj. membr., ff. 28, s. xv. vel xvi.

Medical Treatise.

The first leaf is mutilated. The first page gives an Irish explanation of some Latin words for colours, etc., but is nearly illegible.

p. 3 commences a treatise on diseases, ending imperfect on p. 20.

p. 21. Alphabetical list of plants, minerals, etc., used in medicine, with account of their properties and the manner of preparing them. Defective from near the beginning of the letter C to the end of P; complete from that to the end. This is the same work that is mentioned above No. 1324. This copy is beautifully written, and many of the capitals were adorned with silver.

1335 4to chart., A.D. 1697.

Tales, etc.

The first two pp., not included in the pagination, contain in a later hand a satirical poem written against Dr. Whaley, an astrologer and almanack maker in Dublin in the 17th century.

The second leaf contains on the recto the title of the first story, entitled, Meirlino agus an Spiorada, with the name of the owner, William O'Linchy, and the date 1697, and on the verso the conjugation of two Irish verbs (continued on the recto of the following page).

p. 1 begins the tale of Merlino and the Spirit, which is headed by a spirited drawing of two knights on horseback. Ends p. 23.

p. 24. Tale entitled Orlando and Melora, also preceded by a drawing. Ends p. 71.

After p. 71 are 27 leaves left blank by the original scribe, on which Edward Lhwyd has written notes for his Archæologia.

p. 73. A short Irish Grammar (in the Irish language) in the same handwriting as pp. 1–71, with the name of Wm. O'Linchy, and the date 1696 on the title.

p. 96. Brief and plaine rules for the reading of the Irish tongue. In the same handwriting.

1336 4to membr., ss. xv., xvi.

Brehon Law Tracts and Miscellanea.

The penmanship is beautiful, and many of the capitals are ornamented with red, green, and silver. In some of the initial letters grotesque figures of animals are introduced. There is a copious gloss. From a note at the bottom of p. 1 we learn that the volume belonged to Duald Mac Firbis in 1666. A notice at the bottom of col. 161 informs us that this part of the volume was transcribed by John Mac Egan of Ormond, and from other memoranda at the bottom of cols. 193, 194, and the top of col. 223. It appears that it was transcribed in Leinster, and belonged to Edmond O'Doran, who was hereditary Brehon of that province. In the mem. on 193, 194 the scribe excuses his bad writing by the badness of the ink and the coldness of the weather, which was Christmas time. This tract ends on col. 254; the next three columns being left blank and numbered as one.

Col. 255–303. A Law tract (called the Sechta, or Heptads) in the same hand written in capital letters, with a copious interlined gloss. Ends imperfect.

Col. 304. The Bretha Comhaithchesa.

Col. 311. Of taking possession of land. There are sundry whimsical remarks of the scribe (John Cosnavy) in the margin. It appears that he moved from place to place while copying the MS., some staves being written at Acha-Maw, some at Castle Fleming, etc.

Col. 349. On the classification of tribes in a territory; impf. (See Ne. 1316, p. 13.)

Col. 351. (In a different hand.) Another copy of the Heptads; the text in capitals, with a gloss and commentary in small letters interlined.

Col. 393. Part of the Seanchus Mor, the text in capitals, with gloss and commentary in small letters interlined. The text corresponds with that of col. 12 to col. 60, and some defects of the copy may be supplied from this.

The tract on landlord and tenant contained in No. 1316, pp. 15 sqq.; in capital letters with copious commentary in small letters, 5 ff., apparently of the 15th century. In a memorandum at the bottom of 427, 428, the scribe laments the slaying of Turlogh Buidhe [O'Brien] by the son of O'Loughlin, and gives his own name; Carbry, the son of Shane [Mac Egan]. From a memorandum at the foot of col. 430, it appears that, when this memorandum was written, the tract consisted of 108 ff.

Col. 431. A fragment consisting of 14 ff. of larger size than the preceding, with some small bits inserted in several places. It contains a commentary on various articles of the Brehon Laws, on rules of evidence, and of pleading, and gives very curious explanations of old words and phrases long obsolete.

Col. 447. Laws relating to arson.

Col. 449. The Cain lanamhna. On a piece of vellum inserted between the pages numbered 449, 450, and 451, 452 is a short notice, in a different hand, of the reason why the Pope gave Ireland to the king of England. See above.

Under this is a memorandum (in Irish) in the same hand, dated A.D. 1577, 'That is a bad little scrap for thee, O Egan, from Gabrial, etc.'; and under this another in the hand of the transcriber of the whole tract: 'It is easy to know Gabrial's part here, whatever be the reason.' At the bottom of cols. 465, 466, is another memorandum in the handwriting of the same Gabrial who transcribed the whole of that page 'in a hurry and with a bad pen, A.D. 1577.'

Col. 469. A Law tract, in a different hand, headed: Dia ꝑıꝓ cıa ıꝑ bꝛeıtheam ın gaḋ cúıꝓ, i.e. 'To know who is judge in every cause.' It occupies 165 cols. closely written. At the bottom of 493, 494 is a memorandum showing that it was transcribed by Aodhagan (probably Egan Mac Egan) in the year 1575.

At the bottom of 501, 502, the scribe gives his curse to 'Cormac, the blind, in the year 1575.' At the bottom of 511, 512, he signs himself Egan, son of Conor. On a slip inserted between 515, 516, and 517, 518, the same scribe writes a note saying, 'Terrible news from the territory of Ely, viz. that Kian, the son of Teige, son of Donogh O'Carroll was killed by the O'Carroll (William Odhar), and many of his people along with him, and in my opinion this is but paying the tithes. I am Egan, son of Conor, etc.' At the bottom of 550, 551, the scribe has written a Rann to commemorate the death of this Kian O'Carroll. From a note on 521, 522, and another on 552, 553, it appears that the plague was then raging in Connaught.

Col. 634. A fragment of 3 ff. in a different handwriting, containing part of a commentary on the Brehon Laws.

Col. 644. A short Law tract treating of theft and murder.

Col. 645. A commentary on various passages of the Brehon Laws, illustrated by anecdotes.

Col. 654. The Bretha Nemhidh. Ends on col. 670. On col. 653 is a law regulating the prices paid for building Churches, Penitentiaries, and Round Towers. 'This is,' says O'Donovan, 'the most valuable authority hitherto discovered for proving the origin and uses of the Round Towers of Ireland, on which so many modern sciolists have attempted to write. This sets the question at rest for ever.'

Col. 673. Short extracts on various subjects, but mostly proverbial, and historical, and religious; pedigrees of the Blessed Virgin and of Joseph, anecdotes of Irish saints, etc. At the end of col. 680 are the words, 'constat fol. 95,' in the handwriting of Mr. Lhwyd.

Col. 681. Fragment consisting of 8 ff., 4to, apparently of the 15th century. The first leaf was originally left blank, as a cover, but has since been written on in Latin. It contains a prayer written in the secretary hand of the time of Henry VIII.

Col. 682. Poem on four remarkable trees in the East.

Col. 683. A historical tale entitled Fleadh Bricrinn (see No. 1318, col. 759). Ends imperfect at col. 710.

Col. 711. Fragment consisting of 34 ff., 4to. The writing appears to belong to the latter end of the 14th or beginning of the 15th century. The first page is illegible and not numbered. It begins with a fabulous account of the early history of Ireland as related by Fintan (see the Book of Invasions). This copy is much damaged.

Col. 720. Account of the blinding of Cormac Mac Art, monarch of Ireland, by Aengus Gai Buaibhtheach, i.e. Aeneas of the Poisonous Dart, followed by an account of the poisonous dart itself.

Col. 724. Short poem on the history of Cashel, beginning: Caiṗl ac conḃaṗc ané.

Ibid., l. 27. Account of the different territories in Ireland called Partry, followed by two anecdotes of the famous women Saobh, daughter of Oilill and Meave; and Mada of Murresh.

Col. 725. The principal wonders of Ireland. See the Book of Ballymote for a better copy.

Col. 727, l. 16. Anecdotes of Cormac Mac Art and Finn Mac Cumhaill and others.

Col. 728. List of kings of the race of Cormac Cas, who governed Munster and all Ireland.

Col. 729. List of patriarchs, apostles, and other persons mentioned in the Bible.

Col. 731. Tract entitled, Seanchus na relec, i.e. History of the Cemeteries. It enumerates the most celebrated burial places in Ireland before the introduction of Christianity. Ends col. 734, l. 11.

Col. 734, l. 12. List of women celebrated in Irish history as mothers or wives of illustrious personages.

Col. 737. Pedigree of O'Dooley, chieftain of Tertullagh.

Col. 738. Account of the revolutions, distances, etc., of the sun and moon; of the different kinds of men, birds, fishes, etc., and of the different orders of angels who visit the earth.

Col. 740. Account of the plebeian tribes called Aitheach Tuatha, who were subjugated by Tuathal Teachtmhar in the first (?) century.

Col. 743, l. 13, of the genealogy of the Dalaradii, and the pedigree of O'Linchy, chief of Dalaradia.

Col. 746. Story about the three Fothadhs, joint kings of Ireland.

Col. 748, l. 8. Description of the boundaries of Dalcassia or Thomond, as fixed by Oilioll Olum, king of Munster; followed by an account of the Bolgic conquerors of Thomond.

Col. 752, l. 12. Derivations of the names and cognomina of celebrated Irish personages.

Col. 753. Of the ancestors of several Irish tribes.

Col. 754. Of the immediate descendants of Gede Ollgothach, and of other monarchs of Ireland.

Col. 758. Description of the extent of the territories of Corca Laighe, of Tuath O'Conann, and of Tuath Ross, etc.

Col. 760. Pedigree of O'Coffey, a chieftain in Corca Laighe.

Ibid., l. 13. Pedigree of O'Driscoll (a chieftain who ruled over the whole of Corca Laighe).

Col. 761. Pedigrees of the tribes called Gailenuga.

Col. 767, l. 5. Account of the rights, or dues, of the kings of Cashel.

Col. 768, l. 8. History and privileges of Cashel.

Col. 774. 'The Concord of Genealogies,' showing the progenitors in whom different Irish families met.

Col. 778. Of the different orders of bards, their dues and privileges.

Col. 782, l. 17. Account of the birth of Cormac Mac Art.

Col. 785. Of the twelve tribes of Israel.

Col. 787. Anecdote of Cuacht, daughter of Caelbadh of Magh Ailbhe in Leinster, with short notices of other Leinster families.

Col. 788. Of the kings of the race of Heremon, who governed Ireland, and some account of tribes who descended from Heber, and were located in the northern half of Ireland.

Col. 790. A legendary anecdote of Manannan Mac Lir, a celebrated navigator from whom the Isle of Man is said to be named.

Col. 793. Names and anecdotes of several persons famous in ancient Irish history.

Col. 797. List of the stories in ancient Irish literature, which the poets were accustomed to recite for the amusement of kings and chiefs. They had seven times fifty stories, that is, five times fifty chief stories, and twice fifty of an inferior kind. The chief stories related to demolitions, cattle-spoils, courtships, battles, caves, voyages, tragedies, banquets, sieges, adventures, elopements, and plunders.

Col. 800, l. 10. Account of the Bolgic king Eochy Mac Eire, the first who sat at Tara, and an account of Taillteann, Uisneach, and Tlachtga, places of ancient celebrity in Meath.

Col. 801, l. 10. Account of Laiseach Lannmor, the progenitor of O'More and other families of Leix. (This column from l. 10, and those numbered 802–805, are in a later hand than the preceding).

Col. 803, l. 12. Interpretation of the ominous croaking of the raven.

Col. 806. Translation of Nennius' account of the Britons. See No. 1319, p. 172.

Col. 826*c*. The 17 characteristics of a good and a bad argument. In a later hand.

Col. 827. Tale entitled, Tochmarc Ailbhi, i.e. the Courtship of Alvia, daughter of Cormac Mac Art. In a different hand.

Col. 831, l. 12. An interpretation of the appearance and singing of the wren. The left side of this page was left blank by the original scribe, but William, the son of Donnell oge O'Duirnin, has written in it his name and a few observations, A.D. 1670.

The last fragment consists of 12 ff. and 3 half leaves. It is in a different hand from any of the preceding.

Col. 832. The Amhra or Eulogium of St. Senan of Scattery Island, in the Shannon, composed by Dallan-Forguill, author of the Amhra Columcille. Begins: Senan ꝑoep ꝑiṫ ɑcɦɑiꝑ. There is an interlined gloss.

Col. 835, s. f. Prophecy ascribed to St. Fursey of Peronne, followed by another of the signs preceding the day of judgment.

Col. 837, s. f. Of the qualifications of a good clergyman.

This and the six following numbers form part of the Sebright collection (formerly Lhwyd's).

1337 4to et infra membr. et chart.

Miscellanea.

Though bound in quarto form, this volume includes fragments of books of various sizes and different ages. The first three leaves are not included in the pagination. The first of these is mutilated, and on the recto wholly illegible. On the verso it contains part of an Irish Law tract. The second and third contain part of a Latin Psalter, which seems to have had the two versions, namely, that of Jerome and the Vulgate, on alternate pages. The first page is almost illegible, but we can see that it contained Ps. lxxi. 9–21 a in Jerome's version from the Hebrew; the following page contains Ps. lxxi. 21 b to lxxii. 8 in the Vulgate, with marginal glosses in Latin. The next leaf begins with Ps. lxxiii. 3–17 a in Jerome's version; the verso contains lxxiii. 17 b to lxxiv. 2 a, with marginal glosses (illegible). (Incorrectly described by O'Donovan.)

Passing to the numbered pages—

p. 1. A Law tract containing regulations regarding the seven degrees of chieftains. Of the first leaf, only a very small fragment remains. At the top of p. 1 is a memorandum by Edw. Lhwyd, stating that the MS. consists of 218 ff., and that he purchased it from Agnew (hereditary bard of O'Neill of Clannaboy).

p. 14, col. 2. A Law tract, entitled bpeacha Comaichchepa, a collection of rural and pastoral regulations. On p. 14 is a classification of trees, with the fines to be paid for committing trespass on them.

p. 15. Law tract, giving regulations for the Church and the laity. The fines to be paid for killing or wounding persons of various positions in Church and State are enumerated.

p. 19. Law tract, treating of treaties, covenants, witnesses, pledges, etc.

p. 26. A beautiful and perfect copy of the Book of Ogams. Ends p. 35, l. 38.

p. 35, l. 40. Poem by Finghin, son of Flann, for tribe of the Fir Arda, beginning: A mo coimdin Neill, cid do dén fri fir Arda.

p. 37. A moral poem, beginning: Dobérainn Comairle dom charaid.

Ibid., l. 39. Another moral poem, ascribed to Cormac Mac Cullenan, first Archbishop of Cashel, beginning: Eochair céille cloirteacht. Every line begins with Eochair.

p. 38. Account of the first inhabitants of Ireland, as told by the fabled character Tuan Mac Cairill to St. Finnén. There is only one page of this here. There is a larger fragment in the Leabhar na h-Uidhri (R. I. A.).

p. 39, 2, l. 15. Short account of the musical notes used in chanting.

p. 40, l. 9. Short anecdote of St. Brendan.

Ibid., l. 24. Short article, 'De prudentissimo Homine.'

Ibid., col. 2, l. 8. Poem said to be addressed to King Cormac MacArt by his chief judge, Fithil, after a feast, beginning: Hí gua mé.

p. 41. A curious poem, treating of jurisprudence, ascribed to a poet of the name Dubh-da-thuath. Begins: dia m-bad mere bad fig feil.

p. 42. A story about Cormac Gaileng (son of Tiege, son of Kian, son of Oilill Olum), ancestor of the tribes called Gaileanga.

p. 42, col. 2, l. 18. A story about Cailleach Berse, a Banshee well known in most parts of Ireland.

p. 43. A moral poem, beginning: Carpait laech acus eich do bertir buaid.

p. 44, l. 11. Astrological observations.

p. 45. Religious observations.

p. 45, l. 14. Fintan's poem on the number of Triocha Ceds, etc., in Ireland.

p. 46. Account of the coming of Partholan.

p. 47, l. 13. Tale about Baile mac Buain, a celebrated Pagan character of Dundalk.

p. 48, col. 2. De Conceptione Concubari filii Nessa.

Ibid., l. 18. A story about Guaire Aidhne, King of Connaught, and Oeno Mac Hui Loighsi, Abbot of Clonmacnoise.

Here O'Donovan's catalogue comes to an abrupt termination.

p. 49. Feircertne's poem in praise of Cersai Mac Duire. There is an interlinear gloss. In their present state the leaves are 7″ × 5″, but they are made up of two pieces sewn together with parchment, the upper 3″ × 14″, the lower 3½″ × 10″, with a pendant 10″ × 2¼″, making the whole like an inverted L, containing a vocabulary of old words.

p. 53. Amergin Glengeall's poem, beginning: Mo coipe coip Goimach. With interlinear gloss. The leaves are of the same size as the preceding, and the second is similarly made up of two pieces sewn with silk. The first has also a defect supplied by a piece sewn with parchment.

p. 59. On the origin of the Greek and Roman Laws.

p. 60. Various short extracts.

pp. 61, 62. A fragment of a glossary, 5″ × 3½″.

p. 63. A glossary, alphabetically arranged, ff. 7.

p. 76. Part of a glossary, L to S, chart., ff. 4.

p. 84. On the diseases of horses, membr., f. 1.

p. 86. Explanation of some hard words in the Felire of Oengus, f. 1.

p. 88. The Uraiceacht Beag, or Lesser Rudiments, containing an explanation of legal phrases. ff. 12, impf., 7″ × 5½″.

p. 112. A Law tract. ff. 20, impf., 4½″ × 4½″.

Not numbered: fragment on Law. ff. 10, 4″ × 4″.

p. 152. The Dialogue of the Two Sages, with an interlinear gloss.

p. 157. Explanation of ancient Law terms, by Giolla na Naomh, son of Donslevy Mac Egan, chief Professor of Law.

p. 167. A Law tract, in the same handwriting as the preceding, and forming part of the same booklet. Ends imperfect.

pp. 173–184. Two Law tracts (not in the same hand as the preceding).

p. 185. Another Law tract, with some glosses.

p. 196. Beginning of the romantic tale of the Feis Tigh Canain.

pp. 197–202. A tract written in the Ogam Consaine. At the bottom of the first page is a line in the Ogam Craoibh. ff. 3, $6\frac{1}{8}'' \times 4\frac{1}{2}''$.

pp. 203–206. A Law tract. ff. 2, $6\frac{1}{2}'' \times 4\frac{1}{2}''$.

pp. 207–209. Fragment of a Law tract.

pp. 210–213. Poem beginning: Dichne dam homa pe haei, with interlinear gloss.

pp. 214–256. (The No. 244 is repeated in error.) Treatise on Law, s. xiv. (?), with some glosses. ff. 21, $8'' \times 5\frac{1}{2}''$.

pp. 417, 418. On the Virtues of Aqua Vitae, etc.

pp. 419–422. Another fragment of a work on Law.

pp. 423–439. Treatise on Law; impf. ff. 9, $10'' \times 7''$. At the top of 423 Edw. Lhwyd has written his name, with 'Constat fol. 95,' and a memorandum in Welsh: '6. Kaw y Dalennae ereill gwedi kam-osod ynrhyw van a ralh.'

pp. 437–439. Two fragments of Law tracts. At tho top of 437, in Edw. Lhwyd's hand, 'C^{t} fol. 95,' with a money account continued on the next page.

pp. 440–454, s. xiv. (?) A Law tract, containing ancient maxims and phrases, with gloss and commentary.

On p. 440 Edw. Lhwyd has written '9 Const. 8 ff.'

p. 455. (Verso of last leaf of the preceding) in a later hand. A decision made by the O'Dorans in a dispute about land between Gerald, son of Cathal Carrach, and Brian, son of Muircheartagh, and Donogh Mac Criomthein. The names of the witnesses are given, and the date 1561. Below this is an account of the boundary stones erected and mearings marked out.

pp. 456, 457. Two pages of a fragment on Law.

pp. 458–466. Fragment of a Law tract. 7″ × 5″. The first page, which is illegible, is not reckoned in the pagination. At the bottom of p. 459 is a memorandum by Edw. Lhwyd, recording that he bought this book (containing 458–51) from Cormac O'Guirin, Co. Sligo, A.D. 1700.

pp. 467, 468. Some explanations of words.

pp. 469–492. Fragment of a Law tract.

pp. 493–506. Law tract. P. 493 contains the ancient text, in large characters, with copious interlined gloss. What follows is commentary.

p. 507. Begins another Law tract, which ends on p. 515.

pp. 516–518. Two leaves of a Law tract, the last page (not reckoned in the pagination) not legible. Another smaller leaf, now numbered 518¾, is inserted.

pp. 519 and 519 (bis). A glossary of hard words.

pp. 520–528. Notes on the Life of St. Patrick, with frequent interlined glosses. At the beginning of the volume are 4 paper leaves, containing a transcription of these glosses, in a cover addressed to Dr. John O'Donovan.

pp. 528–533. Some account of Eochaidh Feidhlioch, monarch of Ireland.

pp. 538–541. Fragment of a Law tract, containing explanations of terms, with occasional interlined glosses. At the top of 538 is written 'clerich 13.'

p. 542 is the verso of what was formerly the cover of the collection, 543–564. 7½ × 5½ (about s. xiv.). On p. 543 is the number 14.

pp. 543–555. Dialogue of the Two Sages, with copious interlined gloss.

pp. 555, 556. Historical memoranda. In the second column of 556 begins an account of Bishop Gondicra and his brother, in a later hand. This is followed, on p. 559, by a poem beginning: Tre focal tagrait fiuid.

p. 560. Poem beginning: Dub gilla dub arm naire, with interlined gloss.

p. 563. Poem beginning: Ir truag in ceir a mbiaam. The two leaves that follow are not numbered; the second formed (with 542) the cover of the collection. O'Reilly says they originally contained pedigrees of some family, adding that the first and last pages are illegible. These really seem never to have been written on, and the pedigree referred to, which is on the second page, consists of only eight steps, and does not seem to have ever extended further. But on these two inner pages paper has been at one time pasted, which contained neat writing, but now illegible.

pp. 565–660 is a collection, the folios of which are separately numbered (the third, however, being passed over), and at the top of p. 565 is a memorandum, in Welsh, by Edw. Lhwyd, stating that he purchased this from Eoin Agnîu, of Larne, Co. Antrim, in the year 1700. There is also the number 15. It is about $6\frac{1}{2}'' \times 5''$, and written about s. xiv.

pp. 565–596. Etymology of the names of monarchs, heroes, poets, etc., of Ireland. Complete. After this, on 596, is an explanation of Sainfiuin and Beltaine.

pp. 596, col. 2,–601. On Alexander, Cæsar, etc., with occasional glosses.

pp. 601–603. On the death of Cuchullin (with occasional glosses).

p. 603, l. 13. Begins a vocabulary, ending p. 622.

pp. 623–626. A glossary, alphabetically arranged. On 626, col. 3, begins another glossary, not so regularly arranged.

p. 630, col. 2. Begins an explanation of Law terms.

pp. 633–638. Another glossary, followed on 638, col. 2, by an explanation of Law terms.

pp. 641–654. A Tract on Language, containing from 649, col. 2, s. f., an explanation of hard words. At the bottom is a scheme of the Ogam Craoibh.

p. 654, col. 2, s. f., and p. 655. Originally left blank, now contains the beginning of the Uraicepht (in a later and very bad hand).

pp. 656–660. Seems to be a continuation of the matter which preceded this later writing. It ends in the middle of 660, col. 1.

pp. 661 and 668 are respectively the verso of the first leaf and the recto of the last leaf of the cover of a tract of 3 ff., $5\frac{1}{2}'' \times 4''$ (662–667), which consists of a fragment of a vocabulary. The other pages of these outside leaves, being illegible, are not numbered. They are also a fragment of a vocabulary.

The remainder of the volume is paper, with the exception of a few leaves at the end not paged.

p. 669. Fragment consisting of 14 ff. written at end of the 17th century. It contains:

p. 669. Poem on the O'Neills.

p. 684. Genealogy of Mac Uidhilin or MacQuillan.

pp. 686–693. A single loose leaf containing verses by Owen O'Gnimh, beg.: Fogur forcuin don oige. Having been twice folded, and broken in one fold, it is numbered as eight pages. O'Reilly calls it illegible, which it certainly is not.

pp. 694–699 (with the number 17 at the top of 695) contain:

p. 694. A poem, beg: Sioċ liom do ċor aċolla.

pp. 697–699. Short Notes by the same scribe, Cathalus Mackonnrich, in 1696.

pp. 700–706. A poem, beg.: mallaċt ort a ḟir na ḟgeal.

p. 707. Left blank by the first scribe. Contains some worthless matter in a later and very bad hand.

pp. 708–809. A miscellaneous collection, written about 1700. Containing:

p. 708. The Romance of Bruighean da Coccae.

p. 724. On the death of Ceat, son of Magart.

p. 728. Story of Lugaidh Sruibh Dearg and Deibhforgill.

p. 732. Account of Cathal Mac Fionguine, king of Munster.

p. 743. Scel Mucci Mic Datho. See O'Curry, MS. Materials, p. 486, and "Manners, etc.," III., p. 372. Windisch, Irische Texte, Leipz., 1880. Also in the Book of Leinster.

p. 749. Account of Ronan Mac Aodh, king of Leinster.

p. 756. Story of Desmond, son of Aodh Slaine, Monarch of Ireland.

p. 757. Story of the Táin bó Reaghamhain.

p. 759. Story of Liaduin.

p. 761. Of the Fothards of Leinster.

p. 764. (rightly 765). Poem, beg.: Aiċḃi ḋaṁrae ber mara.

p. 766. Poem, beg.: Ḟuair ḃreiṫni a ḋiol do ḟeaḡlaiḋ.

p. 769. Some commemorative verses.

p. 771. Vision of Tunthal or Tundal: translated from the Latin. This is interrupted by the following:

pp. 777–779. A folio leaf, folded in two, inserted, containing part of a poem.

pp. 780–791. Two fragments of historical tales.

p. 792. Vision of Tundal continued. Ends p. 809.

p. 810. begins a series of genealogies of Irish families. The ink is extremely faint.

Some leaves, very mutilated, are inserted after p. 844, but not numbered.

After p. 868 is a small vellum fragment, and after this two separate fragments, each consisting of two leaves of vellum, not numbered.

The second of these (of which only two pages are legible) contains part of a Latin chronicle; the events recorded are of the 14th century.

This is doubtless the MS. grammar mentioned by Lhwyd, p. 299, pp. 51. Followed by a treatise, De Poesi, dated at the end 1706.

2. Oblong 13″ × 8″. Explanation of Irish names of places addressed to Edw. Lhwyd; also: the autograph of the verses addressed to him by Robert Campbell (Archæol. after the Preface), with a few other papers of no importance.

3. 16″ × 11″. Fragment of a comparative vocabulary of Latin, Cornish, and Armoric, from Ob to the end of the alphabet. This is much less full than the comparative vocabulary in the Archæologia, yet many words are given which are not there.

The Cornish is generally quoted with Lh. added. Some of the Armoric words appear to have been written by a Frenchman.

This is followed by a list of Latin words from Nadir to the end of the alphabet, with spaces left for the insertion of Celtic and Armoric words; but many of these spaces have never been filled.

4. The Welsh Preface to the Archæologia.

This seems to be the copy handed to the printer, as it has on the margin directions to the printer. It only extends to the end of the third printed page.

5. Two Armoric Vocabularies.

The first 11 pp. (except for one line under B) begins with C; the second (6 pp.), in a different hand, begins with Di, and does not proceed beyond Se. They differ very much as to the words included. The second was written by a Frenchman (the English is added by another hand); it contains a few of the words in the vocabulary printed by Lhwyd. The first contains words not in the printed book. It has a supplementary page to the letter G. There are 4 pp. of a Latin Armoric vocabulary containing only the letters P Q R S. There is included in this portion an imperfect copy of a charter relating to the Abbey of Strata Florida.

6. Ms. The Irish Grammar, printed in the Archæologia (imperfect). Also 4 pp. of Notes relating to Irish Pronunciation and Orthography, written by Edw. Lhwyd.

7. Various fragments of the Irish Preface to Lhwyd's Irish-English Dictionary, Archæologia, pp. 310 sqq.

8. Part of the printed text of Lhwyd's Irish-English Dictionary, with copious MS. notes and additions by O'Flaherty, author of 'Ogygia,' dated 23rd October, 1704, containing sheets L M N O P T Z, Aa to Ee.

These notes have been used by Lhwyd in his Appendix.

9. A sheet 61″ × 32″, containing on one side an Irish-Latin Vocabulary, and on the other a Latin-Basque Vocabulary.

10. Appendix to the Irish-English Dictionary (Archæologia, pp. 426 sqq.)

11. Various fragments.

1393 4to, chart., s. xvi.

Miscellaneous.

1. Copy of an ancient tract on the derivation of the names of ancient Irish men of distinction, with some pedigrees, ff. 24.

A Collection of (14) Irish Deeds.

These are deeds of mortgage, wills, covenants, deeds of arbitration, indentures, etc. Two are in Latin (14 and 26). See a detailed account of these by Dr. Todd, in the Proceedings of the Royal Irish Academy, vol. vii., pp. 15 sqq. The deeds there numbered 9, and 15–24 are not in this collection. 15–21 were, at the date of Dr. Todd's paper, in Eugene Curry's collection. For 22 and 23 see following number. There are two not mentioned by Dr. Todd.

Transcript and Translation of the preceding Deeds, by Eugene Curry.

This transcript includes Nos. 15–21, which were in Mr. Curry's own possession. The original of 22 is in the British Museum (Egerton, No. 139, p. 179). That of 23 is in this Library. It is a judgment of four Brehons in a controversy respecting land, and is interesting as showing that, in 1560, which is the date of the document, the Brehon Law continued to be practised (as indeed it was for at least 100 years after).

Tibetan.—A Calendar 26″ × 18″ (printed).

The 2nd line contains the names of the 10 elements, wood, fire, earth, iron, water, each masculine and feminine as in Chinese.

3rd line. The 12 signs of the Zodiac with the colours of the elements named above (Mouse, Ox, Tiger, Hare, Dragon, Serpent, Horse, Sheep, Ape, Bird, Dog, Hog.)

8th line. Symbols for 3, 5, 9, 1, recurring, each with its colour. In the second instance 9 occurs twice.

9th, 10th, 11th. The digits in reversed order, each with its colour (1, 8, 6, white; 9, 7, red; 3, blue; 2, gray; 4, green; 5, yellow).

The 9th line thus:—9 8 7 6 5, etc.

The 10th line thus:—4 3 2 1 9, etc.

The 11th line thus:—7 6 5 4 3, etc.

12th line has the five elements, each single.

13th, the 12 signs each with the colour of the element above it.

The combinations of the five elements (or 10) with the 12 signs give the names of the years in the cycle of 60.

On the right hand side below is a series of magic squares; and on the outer border the names of the signs.

(Presented by Rev. Dr. Stubbs.)

1657 membr.

Tibetan.—Nine vellum leaves about 25″ long and 6½″ to 8½″ wide.

The contents are as follows:—

1. A leaf of the Prajñāpāramitā, containing the conclusion of ch. 16 (with the title) and the beginning of ch. 17 (fol. 52 in the recension of 100,000 verses).

2, 3. The conclusions of ch. 14 and ch. 16, respectively, of the same work in the recension of 8000 verses.

4–6. ff. 14, 31, 58 (?) of the Bhadrakalpika-sūtra, being portions of chaps. 20, 21, etc.

7, 8. Fragments of the Kanjur, containing part of sūtra 11 and the beginning of sūtra 12.

9. Unidentified fragment of a work treating apparently of the four truths of Buddhism.

1658 sqq.

Egyptian.—Papyri presented by Lord Kingsborough. The following account is abridged from Dr. Edw. Hincks' 'Catalogue of the Egyptian Manuscripts in the Library of Trinity College, Dublin,' Dublin, 1843. The numbers are those in Hincks' Catalogue.

1658

Egyptian.—1. Demotic. A Deed of Sale, dated the 23rd year of Ptolemy Euergetes, 33″ × 11″. At the foot are the remains of a line in Greek. At the back are remains of the names of witnesses.

1659

Egyptian.—2. Demotic. Two Deeds of Sale, both dated 7th year of Ptolemy Epiphanes, 37″ × 10½″. The names of the sixteen witnesses are at the back.

1660

Egyptian.—3. Demotic. A Deed of Sale, dated 5th year of Ptolemy Philometor, 27″ × 18″. The names of the sixteen witnesses are at the back.

Egyptian.—4. Hieroglyphic. Extracts from the Book of the Dead, 201″ × 14½″ (between the lines 13″), but it has been divided into three parts since Hincks' time. A small portion, probably four or five inches, is wanting at the beginning, and the first few columns are mutilated. The first three inches are occupied by the remains of a picture in which the deceased was represented worshipping Osiris Fent-hem-pamenti in a naos, accompanied by Isis and Nephtys. At the end of the MS. a space of 46 inches is occupied by an adoration of the Sun, containing 24 columns of text and a picture; a representation of Amenti as a discophorous hawk adored by two men and two women, and by four baboons; and a representation of the deceased and his wife worshipping Hathor as a cow issuing from the mountain, attended by a hippopotamus on her hind legs.

The intervening space is divided by a horizontal band, above which is a series of coloured representations divided by a vertical line 43 inches from the beginning. The former set contains the principal parts of the funeral procession and ceremonies at the tomb, which in the Turin papyrus are placed over the first fifteen chapters. The latter set includes the most remarkable of the representations over the seventeenth chapter, mixed with others that occur in subsequent parts, and some that do not occur in the Turin copy. The text under the first set contains the first chapter with some omissions. That under the second set contains a repetition of the same text, and a part of the seventeenth chapter. The blanks left for the name of the person have not been filled up. Hincks remarks that the MS. has been pronounced to be one of the best in Europe in point of embellishment. It is surpassed, however, by the papyrus of Ani, the embellishments of which are similar in character.

Egyptian. — 5. Hieroglyphic. Extracts from the Book of the Dead, as applied to Sachons, the daughter of Ese, 289″ × 6½″, but now divided into four parts. The interval between the ruled lines at top and bottom is only 5½″. There is a great variety of illustrations coloured, and some gilt. Four of the pictures occupy the whole height. It is defective at the beginning. It begins with the last words of chap. 2, then follow chaps. 3–13 and the second section of 15. Over these are the representations of the ceremonies at the tomb. The following chapters have above them the appropriate vignettes in the place of the titles, viz. 16, 18, 21, 23, 25–27, 30, 31 (these two almost illegible), 33, 34, 37, 40, 41, 43–45, 47, 48, 50–52, 54, 63 (to the middle of col. 3), 71, 72, 76, 81, 87, 89, 91, 92, 100, the picture of the fields of Tmé in chap. 110, and the picture at the end of the chapter (not the text) 101 (part), 117, 124, 125 (to the middle of col. 4), the 42 denials with the names of the assessors, and the picture of the psychostasia, parts of 144, 146, and 148, 151, 152 (to the middle of col. 3), 155–159, the picture in 161, 162–165. 'The text appears to be uncommonly accurate, and the linear hieroglyphics in which it is written, though small, are very neatly and correctly formed. If a critical edition of the Ritual should ever be undertaken, the authority of this MS. would be very great,' Hincks.

1663

chaps. 18 (the invocations of Thôth), 26, 27, and 28.

Over the greater part of the invocations is a space between the ruled lines in which the deities mentioned are represented, with the deceased person doing homage to the rulers of each region. There are some variations from the Turin text which, in Hincks' opinion, seem preferable to it.

Egyptian. — 7. Hieroglyphic. Extracts from the Book of the Dead, as applied to Te-saf, daughter of Tepar, $37\frac{1}{2}'' \times 20''$ (between the lines only $10''$). At the left, where the MS. concludes, is a large representation of the psychostasia; to this was joined the 18th chapter.

1665

Egyptian.—8. Hieroglyphic. A representation of a procession of Deities. The solar hawk, within a circle, is followed by Atmon, and he by 26 others, all swathed like mummies; $46'' \times 8\frac{1}{2}''$ (between the lines $6''$).

Egyptian.—9. Hieroglyphic. Scenes from the Book of the Dead as applied to the sacerdotal scribe of Amonei (or Thebes), $63'' \times 9''$ (between the lines $7''$). On the right is Osiris Fent-hempamenti with a black face, attended by Isis and Nephtys; the deceased is worshipping him. Next to this is the psychostasia in which, contrary to the usual custom, the seat of judgment is occupied by Thôth in the form of a baboon with the moon over his head. Next, the deceased is represented worshipping Chnouphis: some birds are underneath, one of which has a human head, 'probably representing the soul of the deceased.'

These scenes occupy the right hand side of the papyrus; at each end of the other half of it, the deceased is represented worshipping the 42 assessors, who are represented within a house, or shrine, behind which appear two fantastic heads of animals. Over each is an address to him, containing his name, and below it is the name of the deceased. Before the assessors are four other Deities with their names over them, viz. Phré, Atmon, Seb, and Osiris.

Egyptian.—10. Hieroglyphic. Scene from the Book of the Dead, or some similar book, 59″ × 9″ (between the lines 7½″). The superintendent of the store of Amon, king of the gods, Pemahit-chons, is represented at the right of the papyrus worshipping Osiris Fent-hem-pamenti, followed by Isis, Nephtys, and a number of minor deities.

1668

Egyptian.—11. Hieroglyphic. Fragment of a papyrus which seems to have contained an extract from the Book of the Dead, or some similar work, 40″ × 10″ (between the lines 8″). Towards the conclusion is a vignette representing a barge, in which are two baboons adoring the bird Benno, which is within a circular enclosure. No such vignette occurs in the Turin papyrus, nor has the accompanying text been recognised elsewhere.

Egyptian.—12. Hieratic. Fragments of a MS. which appears to have contained parts of most of the chapters of the Book of the Dead, 347″ × 14½″ (divided since Hincks' time), written for Te-bal, daughter of Sachns. As the writer scarcely ever extended a chapter to a second column, more than half the chapters are unfinished. It contains parts of 17, 20, 23, 24, 25, 26, 28, 30, 31–46 (over 42 are the figures of thirteen of the twenty-one deities, among whom the members of the deceased were distributed; 'the names of the members are as completely destroyed as if the hiatus had been intentional),' 48–52, 54, 59–68, 70–98, 100, 101, 103–111 (with the vignette of 112), 113–119, 121, 122, 124, the forty-two denials extracted from 125, with an addition which is not in the Turin copy; the picture of the psychostasia 126, 127 (vignette of 128), 129–133 (the vignette in this chapter differs from that in the Turin copy, and the vignette of 131 omitted there is given here, viz. the deceased worshipping a radiating disk) 136, another chapter not in the Turin copy, 137, 138, 141–158, concluding with the picture of 161. The titles of the chapters and some words in the body of them are written with red ink, and are scarcely legible. In the two large pictures of the Fields of Tmé and the Psychostasia, explanations are written over many of the objects, in hieroglyphics.

Egyptian.—13. Hieratic. Extracts from the Book of the Dead, as applied to the superintendent of the guardians of the temple of Ammon, Psenchons, son of Teai, $123\frac{1}{2}'' \times 12''$ (now divided into two. In Hincks' catalogue the length is given as $61\frac{1}{2}''$). The height may have been originally greater, as the whole of the papyrus is torn along the bottom. It is otherwise much lacerated, but the writing is well preserved. It contains the following chapters, some of which are much mutilated:—18 (latter half), 19 (with the vignette), 21, 23, 31, 32 (?), 40, 50, 51 (?), 54, 74, a picture of the Psychostasia, 113, 114 (?), 115, 121, 126, 127, 137–139, 141, 142, the picture of 148, 162, and another. The vignettes of 18 and 113 are placed near the end. In the picture of 148 the names of the objects are written beside them in hieroglyphics.

Egyptian.—14. Hieratic. Extracts from the Book of the Dead, as applied to the sacerdotal scribe of Thebes, Mahit-chons, son of a priest of Thebes, called Pes-ket-ni-to, 122½″ × 9½″ (now divided into two parts).

At the right-hand extremity is a detached portion, 9½″ square, but much mutilated, in which the deceased is represented worshipping Osiris Fent-hem-pamenti attended by Isis. The first 92 inches are in the Hieratic character, and are divided into twelve columns, the lower part of the last being occupied by something written in red ink, enclosing a vignette of the basin of liquid fire. The deceased is then represented with hands uplifted as in adoration; and before him are thirteen columns of hieroglyphics which have not been recognised in the Turin copy. Beyond these is the picture of the fields of Tmé, and between the compartments of this picture are explanatory legends in hieroglyphics. From the discoloration of the MS. and the fading of the red ink, it is not easy to discover its contents. The second column, however, contains the 6th, 30th, and 29th chapters; and the third begins with chap. 31. The fourth contains chaps. 81 and 80 and the beginning of 85, which is concluded in the sixth column; the 125th chap. begins in the middle of the sixth column; the forty-two denials with the names of the assessors, extend nearly to the bottom of the ninth column, and are followed by the same passage which follows them in No. 12.

Egyptian.—15. Hieratic. 76″ × 40″. Extracts from the Book of the Dead, as applied to a female named Roroon, who was in the service of Amon-Ra, and was a musician to some other deity. It contains a representation of the deceased worshipping Osiris Fent-hem-pamenti with a black face, after which are nine columns in the Hieratic character. The contents are 27 (apparently); 28, a chapter; 6, 5, a chapter; 30, 119, 81, 80, unfinished; 115, a chapter; 77, a short chapter with a title like that of chap. 99, but with the character for 'another' prefixed (it contains the names of certain parts of the ferry-boat); a part of 125, ending with the forty-two denials. There are certainly some chapters in this MS. which are wanting in the Turin copy.

Egyptian.—16. Hieratic. 55″ × 5″. Extracts from the Book of the Dead, as applied to the priest of Amon at Thebes, Djotchons. It begins at the right hand with a well executed picture of the deceased worshipping Phre-Atmon (the rising and setting sun) and Osiris Fent-hem-pamenti, with a black face, as presiding over the night of death. This is followed by eleven columns distinctly written in the Hieratic character. The names of the persons represented in the picture are in hieroglyphics. It contains chaps. 133 and 136, with the commencement of 135, being devotions addressed to the Sun.

Egyptian.—Hieratic. 70″ × 6″. Extracts from the Book of the Dead, as applied to Esenofre, holding some employment in the service of Amon. At the commencement is part of the usual picture of the deceased worshipping Osiris Fent-hem-pamenti, with a black face; the figure of the god remains. This is followed by five columns of Hieratic character. The MS. contains chaps. 23–25, 27, 28, and another entitled 'the chapter of giving . . . the head of the deceased.' There is no chapter with a like title in the Turin copy; and other chapters in this MS. appear to be much fuller than they are there.

Egyptian.—18. Hieratic. A piece of cloth, 19″ × 3½″, containing a line in the Hieratic character relating to Har-si-esi, son of Ese. A royal name appears in it, but it is that of 'Ouon-nofre, the truth-speaking,' that is, Osiris.

Egyptian.—19. Hieratic. Sixteen pieces of linen cloth, being bandages of a mummy. The entire length is about 250″; the height 2½″ to 3″.

Five of them are of a superior texture and contain, among other chapters, the 23rd, and a fragment of the 28th, with the vignette. The remaining eleven are coarse, and only a few words here and there can be made out. The vignettes show that one contains the 102nd and 103rd chapters, and another the 114th and 115th. The vignettes of chaps. 27, 72, and 30 (all on one fragment), 86, 92, and others, are also observable. The copy of 23 here given agrees with that in No. 17, in supplying a passage omitted through an homoeoteleuton in the Turin text.

Syriac.—Ephrem Syrus. De Sapientia et Scientia.

A collection of proverbs alphabetically arranged in twenty-two sections, each section again divided alphabetically into twenty-two.

1710

Letters, chiefly to and from Sir Thos. Larcom, Under-Secretary to the Lord Lieutenant, relating to Orange Processions and other Irish affairs.

These are inserted here and there in a large collection of extracts from newspapers and magazines, bequeathed to the Library by Sir Thos. Larcom in 1879.

A roll, containing the names of Students in the Senior Sophister Class in Easter Term, 1685, with the judgments obtained by each at the Examination. Amongst the names are those of Swift (afterwards Dean of St. Patrick's), Chandler (afterwards Bishop of Durham), and Wilson (afterwards Bishop of Sodor and Man).

Presented by Mr. John Forster, the biographer of Swift.

GENERAL INDEX TO THE CATALOGUE.

THIS INDEX supplies some (nnimportant) omissions in the Catalogue in the enumeration o the contents of Miscellaneous Collections. Hence the reader will sometimes find an item registered here which is not mentioned under the number referred to. Such items are marked with †. The heavy-faced figures refer to the Catalogue numbers. The ordinary figures refer to the sub-divisions of the Catalogue number.
